Ruminations on the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Bad

A collection of Theories and Elucidations compiled from publicly shared writings of

Matthieu Pageau

...with included questions & answers, correspondences and observations on contemporary worldly affairs...

Introductory Notes

Matthieu Pageau is the author of The Language of Creation: Cosmic Symbolism in Genesis: A Commentary. His work aims to serve as a solution for the contemporary issues presented by materialism and its impacts on the spiritual perspective.

In 2023, Matthieu began sharing a series of public writings and commentaries on the Bible, expanding on ideas from his first book and presenting his own interpretations of Biblical stories. He, likewise, shared insights on hidden matters in the contemporary world, which drew both interest and debate from readers. Many found his words enlightening, while others found the more taboo subjects he addressed challenging.

Almost all of these writings, along with many of the discussions that followed, have since been deleted. Nevertheless, careful anticipators had the foresight to keep records and most of those writings were retained. This collection preserves those retained texts, in the belief that Matthieu's ideas and insights will remain relevant for generations to come.

Matthieu himself has remarked that these writings together form, in essence, a book about the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Bad, as described in the Genesis narrative. Many of his insights take the shape of puzzles, guiding the attentive reader toward a deeper understanding of Biblical symbolism and spiritual wisdom. Though fragmentary and diverse in form, the texts assembled here offer enough for a discerning reader to perceive core ideas and draw out their implications.

It is highly recommended to read Matthieu's book The Language of Creation in conjunction with the writings presented here.

Choices Taken in Editing

The written dates mark the time each main insight was first shared. The discussions that followed after were often recorded later and not always on the same day. Some conversations could not be sorted accurately and have been placed together with related insights from approximately the same period. Barring minor corrections and adjustments for clarity, the content of the texts remains faithful to their original form. Though at times disorderly and loosely punctuated, they remain largely understandable.

Since many writings from those who engaged with Matthieu's insights have been lost or deleted — together with information about their authorship — and for reasons of privacy, all respective names have been replaced with the term "Supplicant."

A number of the images presented in this collection have been modified for better clarity and optimized for physical copies.

What happens to a civilization when its leaders eat from the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad? This.

Matthieu: On the stage: WWF wrestling match between Ted DiBiase and Goldust to determine who will host the next basketball game between the Globetrotters and the Washington Generals.
Behind the scenes: A chess game between AI #2137 and AI #4529 to determine which AI will choose the performers in the following wrestling match.
The strategy was to convince everyone that the government needed to include everyone. Once that became the consensus, they gently and gradually applied this standard to everything (not just the government).
The government needs to include everything > Everything needs to include everything.
Applying this recursively leads to the dissolution of all corporations, groups and substructures, leaving only a centralized totalitarian government in full control of a homogenized fluid mass.

Saul is the Messiah (the anointed of God). David is the anti-messiah in the sense that he comes to subvert the existing King (Saul). So all the tactics David uses are methods of subtle subversion. He represents (and is) a secret ruler who controls the margins from the cave of Adulam. David is a dark subversive figure. He represents a shadow government who uses controlled opposition and rebellion against the legitimate King (Saul - he was anointed after all). So David is the archetype of the "anti-Christ". Now the only caveat is that in this story, David is presented as a good guy. We are TOLD that David is the legitimate replacement for Saul by the narrators of the story. We are told that David was secretly anointed, we are TOLD that he should replace Saul. But these are private/secret events. In those days, how could people have known who was a legitimate "replacement" for the current legitimate king (Saul) and who was just a subversive rebellious individual trying to overturn the true King (Saul). So it's a difficult situation. We are told David is legitimate by the authors of the text.... But his role IS subversive. In this sense, the antichrist will resemble King David in his role but will be illegitimate. So it's not easy to tell who is the legitimate "return of the King". The story if David contains the keys for sure (to tell the difference).

Supplicant: Matthieu, can you say a little more about how the David story contains the key to seeing the difference?

Matthieu: I'm probably going to write a whole book about it since it requires good symbolic understanding of Cyclical Time. Most can be deduced from patterns in my book (Language of Creation) and the rest, I talked about briefly elsewhere-> Eve, mirrors, and renewal.

Supplicant: Interesting read. In my humble opinion, the difference is David did not go around saying he was secretly or publicly anointed. The antichrist will claim he is God. It will not be subversive. It with be very outwardly and bodacious just as everything from Satan is.

Matthieu: The antichrist has been secretly taking over gradually for 2000 years. The boastfulness is a recent phenomenon (and not a good sign).

Supplicant: Do you believe in an actual person as the antichrist or do you think it's symbolic imagery for human kingdoms that always inevitably turn from God and turn into Babylon?

Matthieu: The symbolism can be embodied at the communal scale and the individual scale. So both. It can also embody itself within the individual. Real symbolism expresses itself at all scales (although it's not always easy to see exactly how).

Supplicant: There is something similar that happens in Job. We are told by the narrator in the beginning that Job is righteous and that God views Job positively. But once the disasters strike Job, this fact is not obvious, and from his friend's view Job is rebellious and wicked.

Matthieu: We always have to keep this in mind. It's easy to not judge Job because we are told the secret in advance. But when we are faced with it in real life (disasters falling on another) it's more usual to act like Job's "friends".

Supplicant: So I guess the question is, is the author actually portraying him as doing good with these tactics? Achieve good ends thru immoral means? It seems like many of these deeds are depicted in the narrative as part of God's being with him and giving success to his hands.

Matthieu: The goal of the author seems to be to help us differentiate between David's good and David's bad. But it's not easy because even his bad moves often end up being rewarded (after repentance and punishment). Like Solomon out of Bathsheba.

I don't need scholars to tell me David is Machiavellian. It's all over the story. It's basically everything he does. He represents the "good stumbling stone" who renews the King. So he often looks like the "bad stumbling stone" but with subtle differences.

"The stone rejected by the builders became the pinnacle stone". That's a dangerous verse right there. We need discernment, and lots of it. So we have talk about it at some point. Now seems like a good time.

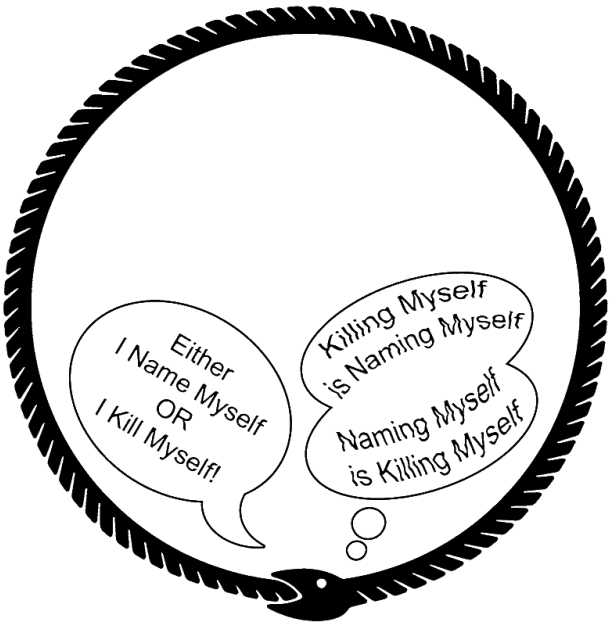
Part of the mystery of change...



Supplicant: Still pondering. I have 2 questions if you don't mind, Mr. Pageau.
1. How to escape this pattern? This pattern so real for people suffered from suicidal thoughts. The confusion comes when the enemy feels like "myself", other time it seems not "myself" but still within myself.

Matthieu: You can't fully escape it, but you don't have to be fully engulfed in it either. You can escape its full confusion by letting something else name you (a higher authority) without necessarily letting it determine you completely. Another way is to separate from your enemy. This happens (the full pattern) when you identify and try to fully join with your opposite (usually your enemy). Once that happens you are in big trouble because you need a higher authority to separate you from the enemy within.

Supplicant: Could you tell us why the bull is associated with the moon?

Matthieu: The Moon "reflects the light of the Sun".
The Flesh "reflects the light of the Will".

Lion eats Bull -> Bull becomes the Flesh of Lion ->
The Bull "reflects the Will of the Lion".

Supplicant: Why did you add this step between the temple and the exile? Why didn't you just go straight from exile to the temple?

Matthieu: In exile, there is full confusion. The cherub is a hybrid creature that basically "eats itself" (similarly for the flaming sword). In this stage, the lion and bull are separate beings in competition. In the temple, there is full cooperation of the two powers.

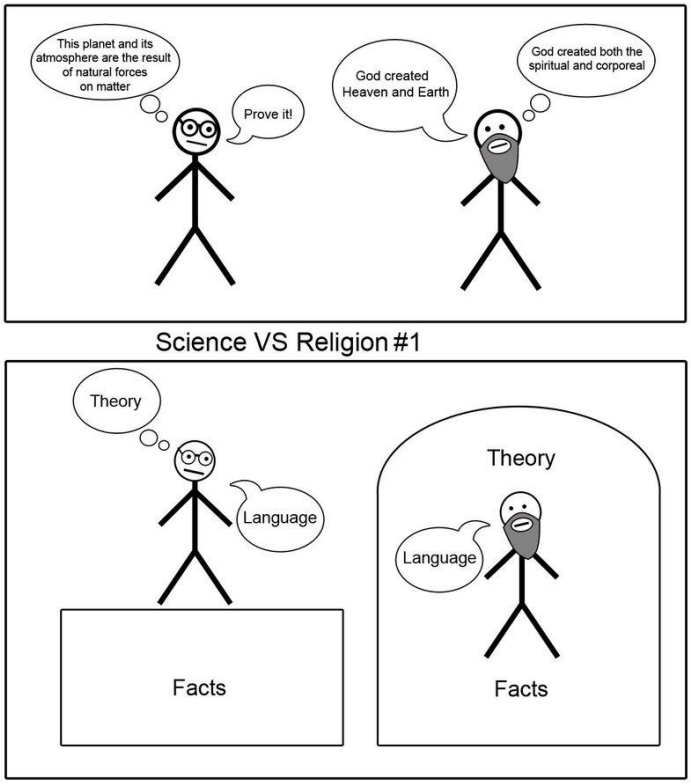
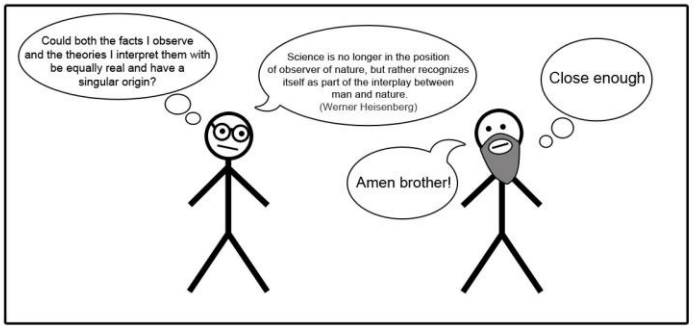
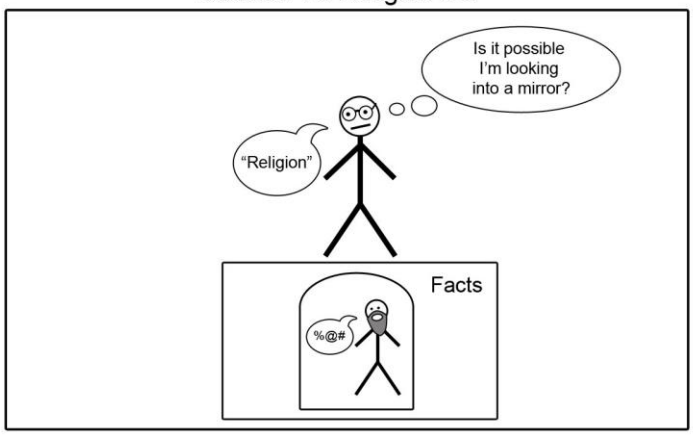
Science and religion #1. Too different to debate. Science and Religion #2. Science eventually "sees itself" and considers its potential similarities with religion.





Could both the facts I observe and the theories I interpret them with be equally real and have a singular origin?
Science is no longer in the position of observer of nature, but rather recognizes itself as part of the interplay between man and nature.
(Werner Heisenberg)
Close enough
Amen brother!

Science VS Religion # 2



Supplicant: This is also what needs to happen to theology, theology was the original science that didn't see itself, from which all the other modern variants come.

Matthieu: It's all about the role of Eve. When it's neglected or subverted we end up where we are now.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: I can't tell if you agree with me or disagree. The entire postmodern world is due to a subversion of Eve. The proper role of Eve is what will stop this madness. This is not the same as "coding a sociology that is all about the role of Eve".

Supplicant: in science we intuit (irrationally perceive) a hypotheses.
then think (rationally judge) an experiment.
then sense (rationally perceive) the results.
then feel (irrationally judge) the conclusion.

in religion, the process is reversed.
the problem is denial of the irrational.

Matthieu: The other problem is that most scientists don't see themselves fully as part of reality. They see their own ideas/theories as unreal while the true religious mind knows that some ideas are (in some sense) more real than facts and are received, not fabricated.

Supplicant: It's principality or conspiracy theory. Those are the options. So you say that before Elon Musk, Twitter was run by a Woke conspiracy?

Matthieu: Those aren't exclusive... And if there was ever a time to finally acknowledge that "principalities" have physically incarnated into groups of individuals to form highly organized conspiracies, it's now.

Supplicant: Going with JBP's idea that the individual members are not conscious of the total mind of the total ideology (the principality), perhaps 'possession' is better than 'conspiracy'.

Matthieu: Nope. It's a conspiracy. And it's obvious because their plans are all over the place now. But for some mysterious reason everyone wants to see coincidences and emergence. The reason is not that mysterious actually.

Supplicant: I think it only fair to point out that Paul doesn't necessarily think of these things as exclusively different, he's trying to get the commenter who doesn't want to acknowledge principalities at all to examine the limits of that worldview.

Matthieu: The existence of evil principalities implies the reality of conspiracies. Conspiracies are how evil principalities exert their influence on larger scales. When they manage to take power, they don't need to hide anymore (as we are starting to experience now).

Supplicant: I've actually wondered if this is why there is frequently 'no evidence' of a conspiracy because the principality works the part takers in it like puppets without them realizing it. And on a larger scale these things work together. But as soon as you start focusing it disappears.

Matthieu: The whole idea of a conspiracy is based on a more basic idea. You can either rule by explicit law (which also applies to the ruler) or you can rule secretly (in which case you can contradict yourself and fool your own subjects).

There are advantages and disadvantages to both.

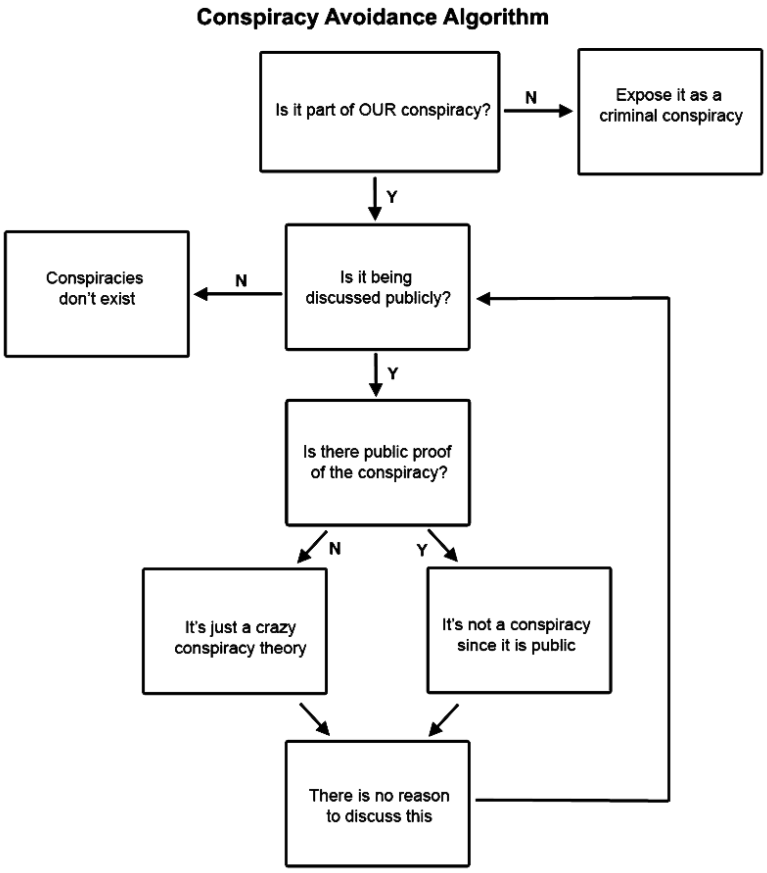
This pattern is sort of a joke (but it still manifests quite often). I will also post (when I have it) the full pattern that is most often used to discredit anyone who notices any "adverse plan" by the strawman of "crazy conspiracy theory".



Supplicant: These flow charts are really helpful. Keep it up.

Matthieu: I have a lot more but they usually involve heavy use of controlled opposition. This concept is still a huge taboo, even though intelligence agencies and even investigative police forces use it all the time. Even King David uses it in the Bible.

Supplicant: Yeah normies tend to dismiss the idea of manipulated outcomes or controlled dialectics or social engineering as being far fetched. They tend to view social trends as if they arise and propagate completely organically, like some kind of emergent property.

Matthieu: I blame the theory of natural selection. Somehow it made people think everything always just emerges naturally (even at the social level). In reality, the people in power are experts at game theory and always have been. Ironically, natural selection actually supports this idea.

Cherub within Cherub

Fractal Cherub

Supplicant: Is there meaning as to the relative position of the faces?

Matthieu: I can try to explain. The eagle represents a higher principle above a duality: lion vs bull. The lion eats the bull etc. The man is mediator of knowledge.

Now that I think about it, this can't be explained easily. The level at which I do it in my book can't be summed up easily. It requires a lot of definitions and considerations. It's something that is easy to understand given a certain way of seeing things (ancient cosmology) but it requires a lot of redefinition and different way of thinking.

Supplicant: So eagle must be above, man below, and the other two on the sides.

The bull and lion have to be on the horizontal, and I suppose it doesn't matter which side each is on? Lion could be on the left, and bull on the right, or vice versa?

Matthieu: It says that the lion was on the right and the bull on the left, so it definitely matters for something.

Lion goes with Judah (south = right) and Bull goes with Joseph (north = left). This is one way to interpret it which is perfectly consistent with other interpretations.

I was able to understand more about the Bible (and reality in general) from making sourdough bread than from reading any book. I'm being 100% serious.

Supplicant: You knead to tell us how.
It's the yeast you could do.

Matthieu: The secret of most of the Bible is "waiting", and there is no ingredient called "yeast". Adam and Eve should have waited, Sarah and Abraham should have waited, Cain should have waited etc.

(I'm totally ignoring the puns in your post, and there's nothing you can do about it)

Supplicant: Evil is nothing but ill timed good. Or is that taking it too far?

Matthieu: I would add: "misplaced", "mistimed", and "misused"

Example. Lying is good when it is funny (a prank or a joke) but not in the context of the law. etc. It's actually a good exercise to find many examples of this. When can evil things be good? and vice versa.

King David knows.

Supplicant: I understand you can get some good information, but more than books? Really? How detailed does bread-knowledge get?

Matthieu: Real knowledge is not really about details. One of our problems today is way too much empty, accidental or superficial details with not much important wisdom.

In other words, too much leaven in our knowledge.

*I used some of the knowledge I gained from making bread right here.

Supplicant: How do you end up actually getting knowledge from using your hands? Obviously you can formulate a question and then pound some nails with a hammer and arrive at the solution.

Matthieu: When you work on concrete things your mind is not trying to solve the problem. Other parts of you (other than your mind) also have insights about reality, sometimes more insightful than your mind. When you do manual work, these other parts are sometimes able to whisper something. If you practice physical activities you realize your body knows a lot of things. In martial arts, you learn things with your mind, and then make your body conform to it. But later (once you know the drill) you learn to listen to your body more and it helps you win in fights. But in terms of rumination. The thing is, if you are trying to understand something NEW, something you don't already know, it's not your mind that will find it. It's your interaction with factual reality that will force a higher intuition to descend (higher than you usual mind).

Supplicant: Do things like drinking wine bring hidden knowledge from your body into your mind?

Matthieu: Sometimes. The other (more obvious) option is by sleeping. Sleeping means your body is "on its own" (no longer controlled by the mind) so in a way it is now "expressing itself" (rather than the mind). The result is the Dream. (=> hidden knowledge from your body into your mind).

Supplicant: The kingdom of heaven is like yeast that a woman took and mixed in with[d] three measures of flour until all of it was leavened.

Matthieu: "yeast" is actually sourdough, not what most people now call yeast when they make bread today.

It's just an aged and ferment type of dough. Sometimes very old.

But maybe you already knew this. Wasn't sure from your tweet.

Supplicant: So yeast is symbolic of tradition and what is old. I had intuited that yeast was symbolic of what's "wild" when my friend told me that yeast can be collected in the air outside.

Matthieu: Yeast is not symbolic of tradition (well I suppose that depends what you include in your concept of tradition). It's related to the idea of foreign influences (cyclical time, empty change) and its influence on increasing the size of something substantial. Here is a good analogy of what yeast is:

You have youtube channel with 100k subscribers but you get about 10k views when you make videos. How can that be? It's because a large portion of the subscribers are like the increase in size due to "yeast". How come you have so many subscribers (= why is the bread so puffed up?). The answer is that your channel has been on youtube for a long enough time, and "accidental viewers" subscribed to you channel based on a sporadic coincidental interest. Given enough time, that accumulates. The accumulation of superficially interested subscribers can only happen over a certain amount of time. Some channels are totally dead and still have 500k subs because they were there long enough (time is directly related to yeast). For a more in-depth interpretation read my book. I mention yeast in chapter 80, but to really understand all the implications you have to see all the implications of what I call "cyclical time" and "time" in general. Yeast is basically a symbol of what I call "time".

Supplicant: Ruminating on this... how the kingdom of heaven is related to foreign influence. Makes sense, but gives me pause because foreign influence “feels bad”. Also thinking about why creation day 2 was not called “good”. Is there a connection here? Is it related to TKG&B?

Matthieu: Day 2 -> TKGB
Day 3 -> Tree of Life

This actually makes a lot of sense. I strongly suggest you keep thinking about it. I certainly will. On day 3, the earth is dried and separated from the waters, then the "Tree bearing fruit with its seed in it" is grown. There is also the idea that the waters above are "good" (sweet = good to drink) and the waters below (the sea) are "bad" (bad to drink - they make you MORE thirsty and cause hallucinations and intoxication when drinking salt water).

So there is definitely something here.
1000%
Of course there is no "tree" here (yet), but there are important analogies here, worth reflecting on.

->Moses puts a tree in the bitter waters to sweeten them (maybe tree of life making the "bad" into "good").

Supplicant: Christ on the cross is the tree of life. We eat of its fruit every Sunday. Christ has transformed the tree of the knowledge of good and evil into the tree of life.

Matthieu: Definitely. The wine is the redeemed bad branch of the tree and the bread is the redeemed good branch. Similar to the story of Joseph in jail and the two dreams. But fully redeemed in Jesus.

There many immediate advantages to lying and ruling with secrecy and falsity. It's important to understand this. But over time, the disadvantages accumulate and the illusion collapses.

This is where we are now. The collapse of an illusion. The disadvantage of lying is that you must maintain your lie artificially. All the implications of the lie must be maintained and controlled at all time.

In the end you must spy on everything and then control all information and communication in order to maintain the illusion. This becomes extremely costly and the whole false system collapses. Sounds familiar.

Supplicant: Iain McGilchrist argues that "The tree of good and evil" Could be called "The tree of useful and useless" and thus promote the left hemisphere of the brain's view onto the world!

Matthieu: I actually interpreted this way at one point and I changed my interpretation based on the stories of the Bible. The "bad" is useful. You can use it to poison your enemies and to get drunk with small quantities of it (for renewal purposes - but be careful not to be like Noah).

Supplicant: Does God create bad or evil? And can we critique God meaningfully if he does since he is the absolute moral standard how could we?, he's the reference point, and is the kind of evil or bad he created actually evil? Or is it our fallen state that perceives these things as such.

Matthieu: "I form the light, and create darkness; I make peace, and create evil [bad]; I am the LORD, that doeth all these things." Isaiah 45 :7

The word is RA = BAD (but it can also be translated as evil, but I wouldn't. RASHA is EVIL (which is not the word used here).

Supplicant: Tolkien had a somewhat different take: “the Men of the Mark do not lie, and therefore they are not easily deceived.”

Matthieu: I agree with this in some sense. If nobody lies around you, then you see all the signs/tells of liars because they clash with what you are used to seeing.

Similarly, when you don't need anything from anyone, you can detect the people who are trying to get something from you.

Adam and Eve are supposed to eat from the TKGB eventually. But it's more complicated than that because when they are able to eat from it correctly there is no difference with it and the tree of life. I'm not trying to sound mysterious here. We can say that the tree of life has 2 "branches" or function if you prefer (similar to the TKGB). One branch is for sustenance and the other is for healing (renewal of life). These two functions are very similar to the good and bad sides of the TKGB respectively. The bad side of the TKGB is potentially also for healing but it also can be used for other purposes too (like poisoning your enemies ... or yourself). Another way to see it is that the TL is a more mild version of the TKGB, one that Adam can eat from without dying. This is why this subject looks paradoxical (it is meant to be, probably). The TL "grows" when Adam can integrate more stuff correctly and the TKGB "shrinks" accordingly. When Adam falls in exile he must solve the problem that made him fall. Then the TL grows and the TKGB shrinks.

[perhaps he meant to say that after the fall the TL shrinks and the TKGB grows.]

The fate of Western civilization in one image.

Satan: Enemy

- Serving Satan: Being controlled by an enemy who ultimately wants you to destroy yourself
- The Great Satan: One who wants to fully control all opposition through deception

Moloch: God of Negative Competition

Moloch's Cloak: The Glory and Cover of Satan

- Satan weaves Moloch by subverting and ridiculing all existing universal principles
- Satan covertly masters the Moloch by being the most ruthless, without principles
- Satan uses Moloch as a cover and then as a scapegoat for his Machiavellian triumph
- Once on top, Satan shows his face as the solution to Moloch and controls all competition

Beelzebub: God of Waste, Losing and Rejection (subverted left)

- Serving Beelzebub: worshiping that which has lost the game and was excluded
- Winning for Beelzebub (and Moloch) is losing the competition

Mammon: God of Accumulation, Success and Acceptance (subverted right)

- Serving Mammon: worshiping that which has won the game and is acclaimed
- Winning for Mammon (and Moloch) is selling out to whatever can win

Supplicant: Quite profound.

Matthieu: The trick is: You hide the most important stuff in stupid cartoons and conspiracy memes.

Supplicant: How does Satan have power despite the fact that Christ came 2k years ago?

Matthieu: I guess it has something to do with almost everyone abandoning Christ. I could be wrong though.

>Why are you making conspiracy theories instead of talking about symbolism.

There is a difference between talking about the subject of conspiracy and making specific theories about specific conspiracies.

>Then why are you talking about the subject of conspiracy instead of talking about Symbolism

Because the "conspiracy" is an important part the symbolism of the "one ring to rule them all" and the "dark lord" that forged it.

>Then why are you just posting memes about conspiracies instead of explaining that?

Because first I have to to at least try to break some of the social conditioning that makes people become smug and dismissive when they hear the expression "conspiracy theory". Because the concept of conspiracy theory (and the army of strawmen that follow it) cloaks a more basic reality, one that is even harder to admit: "I am ruled by my own enemy". Because that is what western civilization has to come to terms with.

Listen Frodo!

We must warn the whole world!!!
But it may already be too late...
Our institutions have been subverted.
The Kingdom of Rohan was infiltrated by Wormtongue and the King was brainwashed into serving the enemy.
Isengard is also subverted.
SARUMAN, The White Wizard, is now self-identifying as "Multicolored" and is secretly raising a revolutionary army against Middle-Earth.
Be careful Frodo!
There are spies everywhere, and you are being tracked by the covert agents of SAURON.
Frodo, heed my counsel!
Never use a Palantir. The enemy is spying on you whenever you look into it.

Blessed is Eve when she can listen to the voice snake, study the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad, recognize that it is "beautiful to see and good for food", but then still refuse to eat from its fruit or strike it down.

Nothing could defeat such a woman.

Supplicant: Nothing could, but that woman doesn't exist, and all mankind's salvation is in the man Christ Jesus.

Matthieu: Part of understanding Jesus is understanding Eve (what she is supposed to be). We have to take back the narrative of Eve from the anti-Christian feminists. I don't see anyone else doing this so I will try.

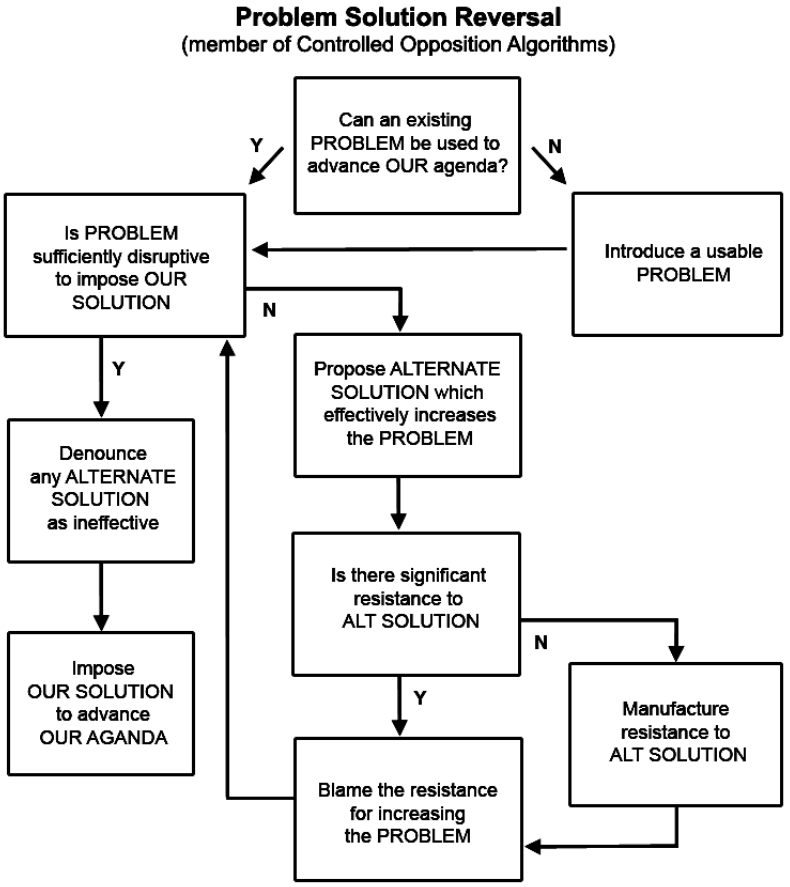
It's come to my attention that nobody seems to understand what the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad refers to in the story of the fall. It's not as mysterious as everyone seems to think. It's just exactly what it says.



Problem Solution Reversal
(member of Controlled Opposition Algorithms)
Can an existing PROBLEM be used to advance OUR agenda?

Is PROBLEM sufficiently disruptive to impose OUR SOLUTION

Denounce any ALTERNATE SOLUTION as ineffective
Propose ALTERNATE SOLUTION which effectively increases the PROBLEM
Is there significant resistance to ALT SOLUTION
N
Y
Impose OUR SOLUTION to advance OUR AGANDA
Manufacture resistance to ALT SOLUTION
Blame the resistance for increasing the PROBLEM

But like all symbolism, it has a lot of implications.

Supplicant: So controlled opposition is related to integrating the good and bad?

Matthieu: It means you are trying to integrate your adversary and use them for your goals, even if your adversary is against these goals.

This creates a "body" with members that don't willfully serve you. They unknowingly serve you (but knowingly are against you) -> fall + self-destruction.

Supplicant: What does it mean to eat from this tree's fruit? To taxonomize solely according to one's own agenda?

Matthieu: It means trying to benefit from both that which is "good for you" (what follows your principles) and that which is "bad for you" (what is against your principles). Machiavellian minds are able to benefit from their enemies by manipulation. You can enslave your enemies and force them to "work for you". That is one way to do it. Or you can trick your enemies into serving you (through lies and infiltrations, etc.). Both are examples of "eating the bad".

Date: May 22, 2023

Supplicant: So controlled opposition is related to integrating the good and bad?

Matthieu: Yes.

This is why Eve is a solution to: "it is not good that Adam is alone". Eve is not controlled opposition but something else: an opposition that loves you.

More generally, the TKGB is related to "integrating your enemy" (this often involves controlled opposition, not always)

Supplicant: Job's wife seems to be "an opposition that loves you". She opposes his integrity and his blessing of God, but it seems to me it is from a place of sorrow and love for Job. She also plays the role of a catalyst in Job's transformation.

Matthieu: Perhaps the story implies she was not doing her job correctly. This might be why the entire thing happens. I'd have to check but I think she was replaced at the end of the story - not that familiar with Job... poetry :(

Wife not doing her job --> Satan (adversary) takes over.

Supplicant: So controlled opposition is a usurpation of the feminine role?

Matthieu: Yes.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: In Jewish tradition, Lilith definitely represents a wife that was not suitable for Adam. So she becomes an adversary (that did not love him). Thus, why she "gives birth to demons" according to J tradition. It symbolizes what happens when joining with an enemy (compare Delilah).

Supplicant: "When the feminine is faced with a conflict, it is her nature to search out the opposing forces that have collided and put an end to the illusory battle between them. A man wants to ensure the triumph of good over evil; a woman wants to diminish the opposition between the two. He fights; she reconciles. More accurately, these are the masculine and feminine ways whether they are found in a man or in a woman." - The Fisher King and the Handless Maiden by Robert A. Johnson

Matthieu: This is very well described.

Woman wants to "make peace between all perspectives" even at the cost of truth if needed. Man wants to judge according to the truth (usually truth based on his principles and standards - but there is no way around that) even at the cost of peace.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: Sure it happens. But this is an interesting case because "his parents" is not a foreign perspective, but rather something like "his principles". So this might be a case of defending your principles against a foreign perspective (which in this case might be the wife herself).

Many stories in the Bible are specifically about the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad. The least I can do (for now) is point two of them out.

1) The book of JOB
2) The story of Joseph

They are examples of God making people eat from TKGB, so Joseph and Job remain guiltless

Supplicant: Okay we're guiltless eating from TKGB only when given it. Job was made to eat from it.

Okay that's a thought. I think.

Matthieu: It's actually almost self-evident sometimes. e.g. If I take something that is not mine, it is stealing. If it is given to me by the owner, it is not stealing.

Supplicant: Is Noah's drunkenness an attempt to eat from the TKGB?

Matthieu: YES.

In the story of Joseph, near the end, Joseph realizes the pattern of the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad, and he ends up fully embodying it. Thus he gains the rare ability to resemble God in this regard. He uses Machiavellian tactics to bring his brothers into Exile. Through confusion of Good and Bad, Joseph is able save the lives of himself and his family. In this manner, the TKGB becomes a Tree of Life. This is very rarely done in a righteous manner. But in this case it was.

*Notice that using the TKGB still causes Exile in this case.

Supplicant: So he uses bad for good? Surely I'm missing something

Matthieu: If this bothers you, I suggest you read the story of Joseph and see what I mean.

Supplicant: I'm just trying to understand.
It seems in Job's story which you also related to this story, God uses the adversary for a good purpose. Is this the point you're trying to make?
I'll read Joseph again and see if I understand better.

Matthieu: Yes. Please read the story of Joseph. It's brilliant.

As for Job, I wasn't necessarily referring to the adversary (satan in this story). Just to the idea of Job being forced to "experience the bad". But these things are definitely related.

Supplicant: Is "Joseph's hand closing the eyes of Israel" an example of taking him to exile (sleep, death)?

Matthieu: yes.

Also, they were taken into exile in "carts" [lit: "cycles" - same root word as golden "calf"]

Supplicant: Wait, Machiavellian principles seem to be of valuable use in several biblical stories, is it because of the inherent nature of mischief or "trickery" that can be manifested on the pattern? In biblical stories there's always a twist or a veil that hides something on the background

Matthieu: Important challenges are:
1) There is a difference between tactics in war against an enemy (like Judges) and using it on your own people.

2) The texts don't always say if some action is considered a sin. e.g. patriarchs use deceit but it does not tell us if this was OK or not.

Supplicant: When the text is not clear if the character is in sin, how de we find out if we can do it or not?

Matthieu: I guess we can't, except through the other laws (which nobody really follows anymore so... that's not so helpful)

Supplicant: > In the story of Joseph, near the end, Joseph realizes the pattern of the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad, and he ends up fully embodying it.

Excuse me, but by doing what? Saying what to whom?

A little elaboration for the cheap seats back here, please.

Matthieu: Just trying to get people reading the story.

But here is an example. Joseph puts silver into the bags of his brothers. That's good! Not really because he is tricking them to accuse them of theft. That's bad! Not really, because he wants to save them. That's good! Not really, etc.

Supplicant: It seems the difference is whether you (using the bad) trick/turn good into evil or evil into good. Tricks cause exile/rumination/change, which can be for an evil purpose or for a higher good. This also seems to be the difference between a "helper against" and a plain enemy.

Matthieu: Exactly, but it's usually a bad idea to delve in this sort of thing. The "snake" bites back every time, even when you have good intentions.

Supplicant: Is it that the end justifies the means? Is the test for righteousness only whether a righteous end has been achieved? So with the end in doubt, it's impossible to know if you are acting righteous in the moment?

Matthieu: I'm just want people to "see the pattern". I'm not claiming to know all the moral implications here. But this problem is the fundament problem of the TKGB pattern, and I don't think it can be solved without knowing the whole picture (which only God has). This is probably why it is forbidden to eat from this tree by one's own volition/desire, even with all the good intentions in the world. Only God has the full picture so how can we judge the righteousness of dubious actions without knowing the final end? We can't. So it is forbidden to eat from this tree (TKGB). But sometimes God makes it happen because God has a bigger plan where some things look bad without the whole picture, but it all becomes a "tree of life" in the end. This is the case of Job and Joseph. Neither of them asked for it. Consider the story of Joseph. It's a story about bad things happening temporarily for a greater good later. So everything that happens becomes ambiguous in the story. Even good things in the story turn out to have bad outcomes. Now consider the end of the story. It ends with "all this bad stuff happened but turned out good and saving us"... This is the end of that story: Yey we are in Exile! But when you know the rest of the story -> They become slaves to Egypt. It suddenly turns all bad. Oh oh. But then when you know the REST of the story -> They come out of Egypt: that's good! We are back to good again...

The point is that we don't know. Only God knows the whole picture. So it is forbidden to eat from TKGB. That's the best way to understand it. The story of Joseph is absolutely brilliant. There is a whole lot to say about it.

Supplicant: And Judah's and Tamara's story is nicely added into the story, which ultimately ends with the True Good being being born into the world.

Matthieu: And Tamar is also all about using "bad" to bring about repentance and renewal of a fallen lineage (Judah).

Supplicant: Joseph's love and desire to save his family results in the exile of Israel.

Matthieu: Yes. And that is very important to notice. It DOES lead to exile, any way we look at it. Whether this ultimately ends in a something positive or not changes nothing to that fact.

Supplicant: What is the mission before time runs out?

Matthieu: Explain the difference between Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad and the Tree of Life, the Role of Eve + the difference between death and sleep, the meaning of David, and how this is applies to "our times". Just listing this out is making me tired, to be honest.

Supplicant: It is like the Voltaire quote: to learn who rules you, find out who you can't criticize. The elusive "they"'s umbra begins to develop a contour

Matthieu: Adversarial intelligence is cyclical in nature (recursively adaptive.)

So knowing that "rulers can't be criticized", we should always assume that they too must have known this and created for themselves a more visible "cover" that also can't be criticized. It is extremely annoying to think in this manner, but it's what inevitably happens in adversarial situations. In itself, this is an important sign to understand our current condition.

So unfortunately, the most obvious and upfront "uncriticizable" is most likely just a cover. Similarly, if you want to hide something, the best hiding place is probably not the one you immediately think is best. You have to assume the thief (if experienced) will be able to arrive at the same "best hiding place" and therefore find it... and round and round it goes.

Snakes are slippery...

> Supplicant: If I understand you correctly, I am in full agreement. To run with the original theme, the "shadow" we cannot criticize is being cast by something else. In essence, you're right. It's a cover; and the chosen "hiding place" does not immediately betray the caster of the shadow.
> Matthieu: But you are right that it helps to see the outlines of the shadow, regardless. Because anything used to hide, once it is recognized as a "cover" can then be used to identify what is hiding behind that (what created the cover).

Supplicant: The Lamb is faultless. What does it say about the accuser? What kind of delusion is it?

Matthieu: An enemy doesn't care if its adversary is guilty or innocent. It want to destroy its foe. Justice has nothing to do with it. The delusion is thinking that, in war, fighters care about justice and truth. That's why we avoid total war at all costs. But it takes two to tango.

> Supplicant: Yes. That violence, once enacted, has its own logic is something we constantly forget, always at our peril.
> Matthieu: Exactly. It's own logic.
> It's a weird logic that does not even care about consistency. In fact, overt consistency is bad in war because it gives out your position and telegraphs your next move.
> Once that logic gets triggered it's very difficult to go back to law & justice.

Something to consider: It's easy to understand why the Matrix wants us to be like Cypher [conscious controlled opposition] but the crown jewel of the Matrix is Neo [unconscious controlled opposition]. Without Neo, the Matrix would be rejected. They want us to identify as Neo.
Make no mistake about it, they are going to build the Matrix, but they need a "Neo" to save us from it before we can accept it. Weird, isn't it?

Supplicant: can you clarify what is "controlled opposition"?

Matthieu: When a group controls its opposition.

There are many ways to do this. 1) Create another group from scratch that pretends to be against the first group. 2) Infiltrate an existing group to control them from within. 3) Finance an existing group and control them that way etc.

Supplicant: Yeah sorry, I kind of naturally discard the last 3 movies.

Can you explain that further? I don't see it yet

Matthieu: The whole pattern is already in the first movie. When Noe encounters the "architect" that's basically what he tells Neo (in a language that is purposely difficult to understand.)

Basically what the architect tells Neo is "you are part of the system and you don't even know it".
What you have to understand is that the whole cosmology of the movie is inverted. But it's very cleverly done because it is implied that it is a metaphor of reality. But it actually isn't. What it really is, is fake problem they created to then solve.

It's not true that we have to liberate ourselves "from the structures of oppression", because God did not create that world (the Matrix). What's really twisted is that the "Matrix" is the world they are creating for us now.

This movie is extremely shrewd in it's construction.

Supplicant: Hello Matthieu, I have a question for you. You talk about the importance of waiting, can you point to an example of waiting too much?

Jonah and the whale comes to mind, but Jonah runs away. Is running away the means of waiting too long?

Matthieu: One of the keys to higher symbolism is to learn how to think with opposites. So this is a very good question. Part of the meaning of Passover is "stop waiting" and this is the basic symbolism of unleavened bread. So the opposite of waiting is "hurry up!". That's one example. Another example of this can be found in the story of Eliezer when he goes to find a wife (Rebekah) for Abraham's son Isaac. At one point in the story the family of Rebekah are trying to delay him in some sort of cyclical trap. But he manages to get out of it and leave. Yet another example can be found in the last story of the book of Judges, when a priest gets back his adulterous wife from her father's house. The father tries to delay him for several days by holding him in a useless time cycle. Yet another example is the story of Sodom, where the angels are trying to get Lot's family to leave but they are tarrying. (notice the unleavened bread here too). By the way, notice the similarities between this story and the previous one.

* I'm sure there are others. a few of these stories are ambiguous as to whether it would have been better to wait after all.

> Supplicant: Can we differentiate opposites from binaries? I warn against the over reduced thinking that binaries can cause. The world is not merely between too opposing points. There are lots of overlapping conflicting points.
> Matthieu: Thinking with opposites is a tool to establish meaning. The fact that things lie in between or outside remains, and are used as influences of change.
> You want more stability? Emphasize opposing pillars as limits.
> You want more transition? Emphasize ambiguity and outliers.
> Our overlords (which don't exist [this is sarcasm]) are masters of this art. Now we are being transitioned/transformed into X. But later (if they get their way) we may be fixed/stabilized into Y.

Matthieu: Another important thing here is that "touch" can also be interpreted as "plague" and maybe even as "strike down". So don't eat the tree and don't strike it down, which makes a lot of sense. Cause if you can't eat it, why not get rid of it (strike it down) but you can't do that. When interpreted like this it conveys the idea that there is a reason for this tree, and maybe eventually this reason will become clear (maybe God uses it etc.)

At the risk of repeating myself. The strategy was to convince us that governments needed to include everything. Once that became the consensus, they gently and gradually applied this standard to everything (not just the government). This gave birth to an official state religion. In truth, it was just a clever ruse to replace all traditional cultures with whatever it is we have now: A culture of revolution. If you disagree with the religion of inclusion you are deemed "hateful" of other groups, as if there is no difference between hating something and simply not wanting to dissolve everything together in confusion, regardless of resulting contradictions. Clownworld was by design. It was the only logical result of force-mixing things that don't mesh at all. (for your information, this is also how one builds a bomb)

Governments are now clowns, always juggling with everything, because they cannot hold all these contradictions at once. This was a controlled demolition job from the start.

Supplicant: Design or inevitability? Trying to escape the pattern results in knowable ways if you are familiar with the pattern.

Matthieu: Definitely design. Western Civ is being restarted. They kepp telling us so it's not a theory. It's not even a conspiracy anymore since they are telling us to our face. They want to "build back better", and they are now doing the first part of that plan which is demolition.

Supplicant: Those idiots could not design their way out of an open box with no sides. Plus, there are lots of people trying to do different things. I am not sure this is any more than wishful thinking by rebels.

Matthieu: Those "idiots" are in power right now. That much seems obvious. Whether they are good at rebuilding things is irrelevant. Whether other people are trying to do other things is irrelevant.

They are not rebels at all. They are the institution. You can disagree on that if you want.

Supplicant: Perhaps they are in the institution but they cannot be the institution. We likely disagree on the definition of power, I have a video on that.
They are in control of many influential positions, but patterns win in the end.

Matthieu: I agree that they won't win.

Understanding the higher patterns is part of that (which is basically why I wrote my book in the first place). But exposing them and the partial patterns they serve is also part of that (which is the only reason I am [on] twitter right now).

Supplicant: 15-minute city/prisons where your CDBC doesn't work if you leave, State-controlled reproduction via externalized wombs.

Matthieu: Yeah. They keep telling us what they are doing, and the implementing it, and yet so many people like to act like it's not happening. It's weird isn't it?

Supplicant: Any of you guys going to identify who "they" is? I personally don't think there is a cabal.

Matthieu: There are different groups with similar agendas, which find common ground. It's the usual suspects. Think of the most obvious 3-4 suspects and that's what it is. Not even hard to figure out, but they have cloaked themselves with magic words so we can't think or talk about it.

Supplicant: Hello Matthieu, I have a question for you.

>*Notice that using the TKGB still causes Exile in this case.
Could this be an argument for the idea that the Incarnation & Crucifixion would've still happened even without the fall?

Matthieu: Independently of the TKGB question, the idea of the sacrificed lamb being necessary in the process of creation might point there. Not sure though. Probably should ask a priest for this one (just make sure he does not worship at the feet of the rainbow instead of the cross).

Supplicant: It seems to me that Exile is a necessary reality for Life and Knowledge to be a gift.

The necessity of the Incarnation and the Crucifixion can only be seen in the light of the self-giving Trinity and we can only see the Trinity in the light of the Incarnation and Crucifixion.

Matthieu: For Christians this is a foundation stone. For Jews who remain, this must be experienced as a "crown". So I can't use Christ to show the validity of Christ, but that Torah culminates to Christ.

This is possible through a phenomenon called the returning light or "pig's light".

Supplicant: Is Solomon asking God for wisdom and discernment of good and bad an example of eating from the TKGB in a proper context? Since he asks God, it is provided to him as a blessing and not a curse.

Matthieu: Solomon and his relation to the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad. One of my favorite stories. Discerning between good and bad is a way to fix the problems that occur under the disobedience of TKGB. The interpretation that TKGB means "knowing duality" is not correct. What is correct is that after improperly eating TKGB man needs to "dress himself" in order to avoid death. Once there is confusion of good and bad, then man needs to "rectify" this confusion by establishing a clear separation between G&B. Then the problems due to the confusion can be "fixed". Look at what Solomon does with his discernment of G&B. He is able to solve the riddle of the 2 prostitutes, where there is confusion of motherhood. He does it by using Machiavellian techniques by the way. He pretends he wants to "cut the baby" but this is a lie/ruse to expose the lies. So he uses deception and the threat of the sword (this is the flaming sword by the way) to solve this confusion. But really he is fooling them. The woman who accepts to lose the child is the real mother. So Solomon is using inversion tactics here, and reverse signals etc. Very Clever. This is another example (along with Joseph) of the TKGB being used against itself and becoming a tree of Life. In the end, the life of the Baby was saved and the rightful mother got justice, and the confusion was resolved. It's a very important story. Thanks for bringing it up.

Supplicant: is it fair to say that for some reason every word in the initial input is taken to its darkest and most expanded possible interpretation? is it possible that there is a lack of a "hierarchy of demons" or "bad things" and everything negative is immediately equated with "the devil".

Matthieu: It's basic strawmanning technique: exaggerate the claim until it becomes absurd and then rebuke the absurd strawman instead of the original claim. The real problem is that (in this case) this all happens in the person's mind and then nonsensical arguments come out instead.

Supplicant: Is it to stick with what you have and complete it, crown it, rather than abandon it, vomit it?

Matthieu: Crowning means you acknowledge there is something above head. That does not mean it was not legitimate. If you can't understand something you encounter, it could be because you need a higher principle to understand it. It does not necessarily contradict current principle.

I am working to reverse engineer the programming that makes people become extremely smug and dismissive whenever negative plans are being pointed out. This is one of the most powerful "magic spells" I have ever witnessed; the cornerstone of what's happening (much more to follow).

Supplicant: Why did it go from Unknown Intentional Negative Outcome to Unknown (UN)Intentional Negative Outcome?

Matthieu: Because the first one is a conspiracy and the second one is just incompetence, or accident, or emergence etc.

Intentional implies there is an adverse plan against us and unintentional means "don't worry about it, and it will all be fixed by the system eventually".
(it won't).

Supplicant: Could you elaborate a little more on the diagram on page 165 of your book, as I've seen it straw manned. Why is the circle divided into 6 and then a 7th remainder? could we just as easily make 6 marks of length so they'd cover the circle? Math isn't my strong point.

Matthieu: If something makes no sense in symbolism, go back to concrete facts and stay away from abstraction. This always works by the way. Sometimes it takes longer than what most people are willing to offer. This is part of what I call "rumination" (getting hands dirty for spiritual insight).
Forget about mathematics if that's not one of your interests (it's not important anyway)

The easiest way to draw a circle on the ground is to cut a length of rope and tie a stake on each end of the rope. You plant one stake in the ground and hold the other stake in your hand.
As one end is fixed in ground, you stretch the rope and use the other stake (like a pencil) to draw the circle in the ground, going around the fixed stake with the rope held tight.

(by the way soon nobody will understand certain symbolic truths because everyone uses computers to draw).
Once you have the circle in the ground, you can now use the length of the rope you just used to measure the length of the line you just drew on the ground (the periphery of the circle).
If you see how many time the rope fits around the circle, the number will always be the same (no matter how big you made the circle using that rope). It will fit six times, but there will be a remainder. The remainder is shorter than the length of the rope. This is the 7th "rest".
This is the most basic meaning of the 6 days of creation, and the 7th "rest" which can't be measured with the length of the rope (when I say can't be measured, I really mean it. No fraction of that rope can measure the remainder, but this is the more abstract math).
This is the most basic meaning of the 6 days of creation, and the 7th "rest" which can't be measured with the length of the rope (when I say can't be measured, I really mean it. No fraction of that rope can measure the remainder, but this is the more abstract math). I don't see how this reality could be criticized in any meaningful way. If you can, please tell me how this is being criticized, I'd definitely like to know. Probably by someone who thinks too abstractly and never gets their hands dirty. Personally, I never listen to such people. Such people could learn a lot from someone like Temple Grandin. The real way to understand symbolism is to get hands dirty by digging in the earth. Then later you can find high level abstractions (if you want) once you found a new insight "from the earth" (a gem). -> "rumination".
Sorry for this long post about such a simple thing (a circle). There really is no substitute for facts: making an actual circle with a rope on the ground and then seeing all the implications.

> Supplicant: How is rumination a gem from the ground, I thought it had to do with animals eating?

This is basically straight from my book. The "confused cloud" painting that we see in this picture is not exactly an explicit representation of a "principality". (I already explain this fully in my book, The Language of Creation - chapters 33, 50, 77).
It represents the "watery cloud", which is what we see when an unknown principle is covertly ruling over a body. A strange principle is ruling over this country during a process of transformation, but it has not been officially revealed yet.

The dark masks represent the transitory anonymity of a confused body awaiting the revelation of a strange new principle. It also represents the silence and secrecy that the subverted body is bound to until the higher principle names them according to the new foreign order. The prominence of the mirrors are very important to this imagery (remember that water is the natural mirror). It represents the processes of "self criticism" that the country must undergo as part of the transformation. The "old flags" (the old identity) needs to be re-examined. I usually don't subscribe the "symbolism happens" mentality, which is why understanding conspiracies at this point is very important. This is perfectly intentional symbolism created by high level "wizards". Most of what is happening in this world can be clearly understood from concepts I explained in my book back in 2018. In particular, everything that happened during the temporary COVID tyranny can be understood in great detail with the patterns I revealed in that book. I think I am going to start showing significant images from the recent past (and present) while posting images of patterns from my book in parallel.

Hopefully this will encourage more people to pay attention to the signs and recognize what's coming.

Supplicant: Was Adam's being exiled to work the ground him being exiled to ruminate?

Matthieu: That's the problem. He should have ruminated before eating the TKGB. All the rest of the Bible is about that: ruminating on the TKGB to fix Adam and Eve's pre-emptive attempts at integration. It was Abel's Job to ruminate. He was the first one whose mission was to ruminate. That's why he is a herder. After the fall, all there is to eat is "the grass of the field" or thorns and thistles. The sheep represent the ability to ruminate slowly and integrate that "grass".

Cain cut that short before it was time (impatient)

Later it was Jacob's job (and his 12 sons - for all the lunar months) to ruminate on the TKGB. This is what it means when Joseph goes to find his brothers in Shechem (this is where Mount Ebal and Gerizim are = the raw TKGB.
When Joseph got there his brothers were in Dothan instead. They were supposed to tend the flock there = to ruminate on TKGB but were not patient enough so they left for Dothan. This is why Joseph had to go to exile (and the rest of them). Before that, when Abraham first comes to Canaan, the first place he visits is Shechem because this is the center of the problem - it's where TKGB is located (Ebal and Gerizim = TKGB). This is when he decides he has to keep moving. This also eventually leads to exile. Shechem is a very important place in Biblical narratives. For some reason this information seems to have been lost at some point. Not sure why.

I'm giving away a lot of info here. Probably too much. Whatever. Time is short.

Supplicant: When you say he should have ruminated before eating from the TKGB, how do you know it wasn't the infinite one's plan to have it happen that way so a wisdom culture could be birthed around the problem that many could then ruminate on? Proverbs 8:23 I was set up from everlasting.

Matthieu: It changes nothing if it was. Now consider that too.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: >When do I know I have found the answer

When you find a simple truth (explanation) and you think to yourself "why didn't I see this before".

Supplicant: Would you mind to help to explain the meaning of "Elijah fed by ravens"?

Matthieu: Here is one interpretation.
A raven is a bird that carries warnings and bad news. (either something is dead nearby or bad weather etc.). It's usually a bearer of BAD news. It's a bad sign.

Prophet Elijah is also like this. The prophet brings bad news and bad weather.

Now think what it means to be "fed by ravens". It means Elijah ends up being fed by negative events. This is an inversion, but all part of being an end-times prophet.

If Elijah predicts bad things, and they happen. These negative facts "feed him". He makes a living on bad events. Think of the opposite.

Jonah predicts bad things, but then these bad things don't happen. (Jonah means dove by the way, opposite of raven).

So Jonah is not being fed as a prophet of negative news. Think about the irony of that. It's pretty funny. I bet you were not expecting this type of interpretation.

When a prophet predicts future events, he gets fed when they happen. This means the facts get integrated by his words (spirit). It's like eating when what you say properly describes what happens. It increases your "body".

Supplicant: I see. So Cain's task was to ruminate on the particular cases of success (his brother's sacrifice) and failure (his own sacrifice), generalize, then particularize with a new attempt at acceptable sacrifice.

Matthieu: Cain's Job was to "Rule over them" which means to subjugate the "bad" and dominate it (like God told him to). Abel's Job was to ruminate. That's why one is the prototype of the priest (Abel) and the other is the prototype of the king (Cain).

Supplicant: So Cain's failure wasn't due to a lack of rumination but a lack of leadership? A lack of subjugation? But the bad was in him, so a lack of self-subjugation? What I'm struggling to understand is: how could Cain have done otherwise than what he did?

Also, are you suggesting that the sacrifice God would have accepted from Cain is Cain ruling properly?

Matthieu: It was both. His brother Abel was supposed to ruminate for him, and therefore offer to God for him (he specialized his activities for that purpose = priest) Cain was supposed to accept that Abel had a special relation to God because of it, but Cain stayed in charge of "the land". Instead of accepting that reality (which came because of the fall) Cain wanted it ALL. He wanted to be BOTH in charge of the land (like a king) AND in charge of the offering (like a priest).

This was not wrong before the fall, but after the fall it is impossible (at that time). Cain wanted to control the world. This is fine because it is his job. Nothing wrong there. The problem is he wanted to also be high-priest. That was not his duty anymore. The idea is that some day the fall would be solved and the problem resolved. Eventually...
By the way, this is the sin of Saul.

Supplicant: In Gen 48:5 Jacob takes ownership of Joseph's boys. Is this an attempt to solve the problem of some years having 13 months?

Matthieu: It might be related to the problem of the 13th remainder month. Not a bad intuition, keep thinking about it.

It's directly related to the incident of Shechem because Simeon and Levi are the one's who did the "operation" in Shechem (the sword of circumcision = flaming sword).

Supplicant: And in the end that's where Joseph gets buried also (Shechem).

Matthieu: It's definitely significant because they carried his bones all the way from Egypt to put them in Shechem. A huge hint as to what I said previously about the meaning of Shechem in relation to TKGB. Relating it also with very first land purchase = Machpelah: burial ground.

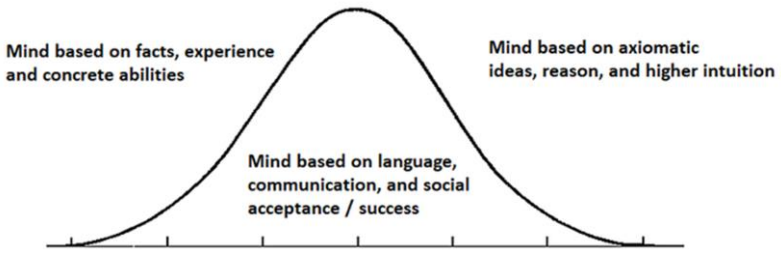
Supplicant: The man who raped Dinah was named Shechem. Jacob and his sons were forced to eat from the tree. Then violence and exile.

Matthieu: This happened in Shechem. This is the first plot of land bought (after Machpela the burial ground - which is very interesting in it's own right) The land was bought first in order to ruminate there (about the TKGB) but the union was forced by the "other side" (this can happen). This is a very important story. Shechem "son of Hamor" means Shechem son of Donkey. In Biblical Cosmology, the donkey often represents "raw matter" or "raw power". It can also be translated as "clay" (raw matter). (notice donkeys don't ruminate or have split hooves). So "Shechem son of Hamor" is a way to signal that this "place" was very raw in its current state (absurd even). They bought the land in order to ruminate but the union was pre-emptively forced by a rape. The result was the "flaming sword turning on itself". This is also an explanation as to why the exile happened. The next part is when Joseph goes there and then ends up being sold by brothers. Meanwhile the start of the solution is found Tamar, but that is a another story.

Supplicant: What happens to a people when they lose their capacity for rumination?

Matthieu: They become atheists.

Supplicant: Could you explain the symbolism of the rise of the "midwit" meme. Maybe just the bell curve/normal dist. The "midwit" often portrayed as atheist, seems a biproduct of rumination and TKGB. Whereas the tails portray those who don't ruminate and those who fully ruminate as



Mind based on facts, experience and concrete abilities
Mind based on axiomatic ideas, reason, and higher intuition
Mind based on language, communication, and social acceptance / success theistic.

Matthieu: The problem with "midwits" is that they think they are too smart for practical experience but they are not smart enough to create language. The midwit's ideas are framed by a received language. So they are most susceptible to being fooled by wizards who create language.

All the midwit needs to do to save himself from corrupting wizards is:

1) listen carefully to a different wizard who is non-corrupting

2) Listen to someone who deals in practical reality. Learn how to build something, plant a garden, raise animals, learn how to fight etc.

Wizards can create worlds of illusion through messing with language. But the low end of the curve is not affected as much, and the high end sees it a mile away. But most don't listen to these ends at all. They are dumb and crazy because they live outside of their word-frame.

Actually, what I like to call "rumination" is all about avoiding the pitfalls of the midwit. There is a certain kind of intelligence that can get fooled and have no idea they are being fooled. They like using big and impressive words but don't want to get their hands dirty.

It's not a lack of intelligence. It's something else (social pride?) which creates gaps between ideas and facts. This is ok when the world ruled by good monks and priests. But when corrupted wizards take over, then the midwit needs to learn how to get hands dirty to save himself.

Supplicant: Shechem is given to Joseph (Ephraim and Manasseh) in gen 48. It is the place where the sword was turned on him but he ends up heir to that place. What does this mean?

Matthieu: Joseph is the one who solves the problem of Shechem (which is the equivalent of TKGB in Canaan). Joshua (of Joseph) negates Mount Ebal (the "bad" side of the tree) with the curse on Ebal.

But this is actually a temporary solution. David is the one who finally redeems the "bad".

> Matthieu: I disagree. What I think about it is in my book. Wisdom is a seed from heaven that gets planted in the earth. The it becomes a foundation that stabilizes the earth. "under-standing" is what stands under like the earth. It's what stretches out the heavens (the seed). There is another aspect to wisdom which makes it the mirror of an even higher principle. But that is another (higher) interpretation. I chose not to mention it (for now).

Supplicant: "The Greek word for "idea," eidos, comes from idein, "to see,"
and is related to the noun, which means two things:
(a) something seen like a form and
(b) a way of seeing like a perspective. We both see ideas and see by means of them. They are both the forms our minds take and what allows our minds to form events into shaped experiences." - Kinds of Power, James Hillman

Matthieu: The higher the idea the more it creates an all-encompassing perspective. When this idea is unknown to others... It's either craziness or genius (from the perspective of others)

Supplicant: Matthieu, reading Judges 13 again after seeing it cited in your book about the Nephilim and Samson, is it a clear example of God himself appearing as a man? It seems that Manoah thinks that, similar to how Jacob reacted- "seeing God," yet he lives.

Matthieu: There are degrees of manifestation. Angels are manifest limited aspects of God (specific messages -> only part of the identity.)

Usually, when it says "Angel of the face" it refers to an important manifestation - the face is very close to the identity (but still not whole being). It's like Adam naming the animals. He does not give his own identity to name the animal, but only part of his identity (a specific limited part, either bigger or smaller versions). But then when he joins with his wife, he gives his full identity (his seed - his full name). In the story of Samson. The "angel" represents something so high that it can't be revealed. It represents an aspect so elevated that it MUST remain hidden (otherwise it self destroys whatever receives it immediately). So the angel keeps his name hidden. Huge implications. So the angel here is a "crown" = something above the head. It means there is something absurd about it (contradictory) which also means it will eventually self destruct in manifestation. (the reason is: it is too high for the time being - maybe later it could manifest properly). In the story, this "later" is symbolized by Samson "growing his hair". This represents (among other things) the need to "wait" before a proper manifestation can occur. (i am giving you a whole lot of info here, hope you appreciate it). Eventually, Samson manifests this higher principle, but improperly. So he ends up self-destructing (committing suicide to bring down his enemies - to avenge his eyes"). So it ends in self destruction. This means the higher principle he was meant to express was not ready yet.

Supplicant: right, I understood all that from the book, about the Nephilim from that, but now it seems you're saying from God's perspective Jesus is the fullness because God has given his full seed and manifested, but the angel is not because he is more a higher principle that can't manifest?

Matthieu: When I say "it can't manifest" I mean it couldn't manifest AT THAT TIME. This does not mean it can't ever manifest. It needs the proper time to manifest properly. This "angel" was unable to manifest IN LIFE at that time. So it manifested IN DEATH (= as Samson's self-destruction). Now compare Jesus' story to the story of Samson and try to see the difference between how Samson killed himself to kill his enemies, and how Jesus was killed by his enemies to save his enemies. etc. etc.

Some traditions say Samson was the closest full manifestation. (until Jesus).

About David and the cycle, I was wondering if it is correct to think of him as the "master of improvisation"? Is this how we can frame the concept of improvisation in biblical terms?

Matthieu: Improvisation is definitely related to the cycle.

Here is general advice about symbolism. Whenever you try to understand anything. Find the opposite (there is usually more than one but find at least one), and then try to understand the first idea in contrast with the other. In doing that (and only in doing that, in my opinion) can solid meaning be established. Otherwise we are talking in circles, and in the void. Meaning is only established by comparing things together.

So here: what's the opposite of improv --> something like a scripted play. In doing so you establish a syntax.

Improv VS Scripted

Then you can even find some analogies and understand a lot of other things. In this case, improv "feeds itself" = it has a feedback loop, white scripted plays don't.

Improv: definitely a cycle in this context

I said I would post about the Rainbow Cult but I am currently needing to wait before I make this information public. I started getting a lot of attacks and at the same time a lot of new insights, which means I have to keep it to myself a little longer. It's a difficult matter.

The Magic Mirror

A fallen king desired to control the world, but he had no light of his own because he sold it off to his enemies a long time ago. Everyone could see that this ruler was weak and cowardly, so he was rejected by all, which forced him to rule in secret For a very long time, he wandered silently to amass great treasures, but it was never enough to control the whole world. He visited every dark corner of every empire until one day, he stumbled upon a great treasure, lost since the days of Solomon. Finally, the fallen king had a treasure impressive enough to conquer everything... but he did not use it to build a great army. Instead, he melted Solomon's gold and built for himself a great mirror, large enough to reflect the entire world. The fallen king invited all the rulers of the world with promises of gold, but they were amazed and paralyzed at the sight of the mirror. Most were so mesmerized by their own reflections that they convinced themselves to follow the fallen king. Some perceived that the mirror inverted everything, but they feared its power, as it threatened to expose their crooked desires. If anyone resisted and drew plans against the fallen ruler, their plans were fully reflected by the mirror and used against them. Many wise and learned scholars came to witness the magic mirror, but all of their knowledge was stolen and reflected back at them.
Most of them were flattered and blinded by the sum of all human knowledge reflected by the mirror. With this magic mirror, the fallen king took full control of the world because there was no way to defeat these reflections.

How can the fallen king be defeated?

When you withhold your light you cannot use it, but when you reveal it, the mirror steals it.

Supplicant: double inversion seems too simple an answer, by shield of another mirror.

Matthieu: Actually, that's the answer I think is probably the best. But I have to admit that I don't fully understand what it means in practice.

Supplicant: Practically for this iteration as hopefully the whole earth is not yet covered, would something like #protecthumandiversitystopgolabilsation work?

Matthieu: The problem with that is that (as usual) they have literally inverted the concept of diversity. It's amazing anyone could get away with it. What they mean by diversity is "Local Diversity" and what they want is "Global Homogeneity" (created through local diversity everywhere).

Supplicant: Why does a fallen king need defeating?

Matthieu: Because he inverts all natural law and ends up enslaving everyone. And probably destroying everything in the process too.

Supplicant: Is the mirror like a gate? And judgment being the gatekeeper(similar to like the flaming cherubim at Eden), when we give our judgment to God(faith and repentance), the mirror has no power to use against us. And we may pass through the fire.

Matthieu: The cherub is a mirror. Only the sword is flaming - these are opposites.

The flaming sword sees itself in the mirror (because it can't solve the riddle of the cherub) and so the sword "turns on itself".
This is deep symbolism. I'll explain it my next book.

Supplicant: Appreciate you. Is this related somehow to Delilah and the philistines solving Samson riddle Matthieu: Yes. Samson is flaming sun-sword who turns on himself (commits suicide).

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: It also works on the weak minded and humble (unfortunately). Because if you are fooled into looking at yourself through the eyes of your adversary, then you begin to criticize yourself excessively until all that is left is basically self-destruction (suicide). An important part of the symbolism of the mirror is connected to the "foreign perspective". But you have to be careful not to "see yourself from the perspective of your enemy" unless it is for tactical reasons within a conflict/war. Otherwise you end up "killing yourself". This is how we can tell that the political left wing in western countries has been subverted by foreign influences. They are creating a mirror, which is what the left-wing should be doing, BUT in which you see yourself as enemy... not in a constructive way, but to self-destroy. By the way, I also see the right-wing as subverted, but in a different way.

Supplicant: Why is there mirror made of Solomon's gold? Wisdom is Solomon's gold, right?

Matthieu: Wisdom is NOT Solomon's gold. God asked Solomon what he wanted, and he chose wisdom INSTEAD of gold (more accurately, he asked for the discernment between good and bad.) So God ALSO gave him the appropriate amount of riches (gold) as the counterweight to his wisdom. In other words, he received the appropriate amount of gold needed (the necessary resources) to fully embody and externalize his high level of wisdom and understanding. So this gold symbolizes what is needed to create a "kingdom" that expresses his level of wisdom. This includes, not just the kingdom of which he was the King (at that precise time -> Israel) but also the entire world. This is symbolized by the 666 gold coins of his sea trading enterprises (which he created with the help of Hiram). This represents a world empire. But Solomon was unable to correctly express this wisdom -> he was seduced into idolatry by his "many foreign wives" (which represent an attempt to seed his wisdom into the whole world - to integrate all foreign cultures into a single empire). Solomon was unsuccessful, and so even his national kingdom (which was his at that moment) was divided and eventually fell to foreign powers as they all went into exile and were even replaced by foreigners in their own country. BUT Solomon's gold remained (the potential to build a world empire), and was quickly lost. It became basically a "buried treasure", or even more appropriately, a "sunken treasure". There are many traditions about Solomon's gold as a lost treasure, representing the fallen (lost) power of a totalizing order (world government). The treasure is cursed, and whoever touches it and uses it will be cursed. It symbolizes the economic power of the antichrist. Interestingly, some of these traditions even exist in the Islamic world. There are other interesting apocalyptic traditions as well about "Solomon's Ring" VS "Moses' Staff", but I don't want to get distracted form the story here (even though it is clearly related). The idea is that the antichrist is the one who eventually finds and uses "Solomon's Gold" to create a false world empire. It is false because he does not have the appropriate level of wisdom (and more importantly, the right level of discernment between good and bad) to build it. The antichrist is able to "find Solomon's gold" and accumulate the necessary amount of gold to build the world empire, but he is unable (or unwilling) to acquire the right amount of wisdom to correctly build and rule over that empire. "Here is Wisdom: Let he that has understanding [of the level of Solomon] calculate the number of the beast, for it is the number of man, and the number is 666".

Supplicant: So if even with God granted wisdom Solomon still failed, what was it that he lacked? One would think that wisdom should've been the thing to prevent such failures.

Matthieu: Good question. What did he lack?

Supplicant: I suspect that he lacked lack. Had no ignorance and no folly. Did not let foreigners be, because he wanted his wisdom to account for everything without exception. (I don't know much about Solomon so this is an educated guess).

Matthieu: Solomon had a phase (in tradition) where he "went crazy and became a fool", like the moon as it goes full dark (David/Solomon are associated with the moon).
--> Ecclesiastes.

This could be seen as an exaggeration that happened because he lacked that attribute in a proper way.

Supplicant: So the gold was always a mirror then in a sense. Sea power, 'sunken' gold, mirror - it's about water.

How to defeat water with fire.

Matthieu: Great observation. It was always about creating a mirror, but only with the proper wisdom. The mirror should not be the only thing either. There needs to also be "dry land" at it's heart -- where the light is not reflected and returned on itself inverted, but hosted correctly.

Supplicant: As regards the demographic cliff we are hurtling towards, we have to ask and account for WHY, seemingly all of a sudden in around '73, the world collectively stopped wanting what EVERY OTHER GENERATION before it wanted.

Desire is game-able.

Matthieu: It's a planned depopulation of the west in order to have an excuse to create a multicultural society. Multiculturalism is just an intermediate stage towards a homogenous monolithic order (a new international culture). Many means were used to induce it-> so many secondary causes.
There are degrees involved. Many things in common creates tightly bound communities. Common ancestry is the oldest (and probably strongest) link, then common language and ideas, then common goals, etc.

To break it, you undo all of these until there is no cohesion. But don't fall for the "color of the skin" strawman. Common ancestry is not superficial. It's a real shared physical/genetic link that does join a community together.

The "color of the skin" meme is a spell created at a time when they needed to undo the links of ancestry. The whole thing is a strawman. The idea that the concept of "race" (a word which has nebulous meaning now ->part of the spell) can be reduced to "skin color" (a superficial attribute) is meant to ridicule and minimize the value of a shared ancestry -> A powerful strawman spell. The spell is meant to ridicule any idea that might go against the plans of multiculturalism. It's even more powerful than the "crazy conspiracy theory" strawman. The truth is, it's not necessarily bad for an individual to be in a multicultural marriage (just to be clear here). But when it's being promoted systematically to everyone with a huge machine pushing it everywhere, then it's at a different level and is highly suspect. Difficult problems (multiculturalism) call for strong solution (protecting different races from genocide by all means possible).

To me it all looks like a plan to bring in totalitarian governments and population control. Ultimately they are to "control the means of reproduction". Think about it. What is the ultimate power a government could have. Control reproduction at all levels. This allows for total power over the destiny of humanity, through artificial reproduction. I also think this plan involves, ultimately, total control over genes-> transhumanism. If they ever put an AI in charge of reproduction, that is the end of humanity. Humans will become the building blocks that another system uses to reproduce itself.

If humanity gives its means of reproduction to an AI, then we will become the body parts of AI.

Ruminate: don't swallow whole (like a snake) and don't fully reject what you can't understand (to later return to your vomit like a dog or pig).
Instead, you partially reject what you can't integrate (but keep it hidden) and continue trying for as long as it takes to understand. Another important part of this is that you must "stand on split hooves" which in this context means, you must try to understand using opposites as a support for rumination. You stand on opposite ideas until you are able to see the higher identity that brings them together.

Date: Jul 9, 2023

When I use the term "rumination" I mean something very specific. "Ruminating" is the opposite of "Reasoning" in the sense that we reason from our first principles, by deduction. So reason is about thinking within the framework of our existing perspective. Deducting from axioms. Rumination is what you do when you suspect that your first principles are either lacking or unclear to you. It's about reconnecting with reality (concrete facts and experience) and "letting facts express themselves". This is difficult because it takes time; it can't be forced. So ruminating is about renewal and crowning your current principles. This is the meaning of Moses and the stone. He was supposed to "ask the stone for water" but instead he "hit it with his staff". The latter means that he attempted to force the stone to renew him. His staff represents something like a "tree" (it's the branch of a tree). The tree expresses itself, as reason does. From a seed, it branches out logically and produces fruit.

But here Moses was supposed to ask the stone for water: this is a stumbling stone or "obstacle stone". It's what I call in my book "trying to subsume time into space". When looking for renewal, you must "let the stone give you water" and not reason your way to it (force it)

This is basically what rumination is about (and more).

Sometimes use your staff, sometimes ask the stone. This is one of the reasons materialistic science was separated from spirituality in our history. At one point, science focused entirely on "asking the stone" (experimentation) while religion focused on preserving its staff (at one point it even stopped trying to hit the stone). When you "listen to the stone" too much you become a materialist and later a complete relativist. When you never listen to the stone you become dogmatic and then dry out. Then, once that happens, you usually end up going too far the other way and get flooded by too much water.

Supplicant: The body is already doing a good job at gripping the world and doing its "rumination" implicitly. The mind attempts to interject its "reason", but by doing that, muddles the contact with reality. When the body's understanding is ripe, it is brought into consciousness on its own.

Matthieu: Yes but you have to listen to it or you can't hear it. That's basically what I mean by "rumination". It's about listening to the facts (with a puzzle that you can't solve in the back of your head) until you get a eureka moment coming from the facts.

Supplicant: That's why dreams are important. Easy to "hear" but not "listen" to Matthieu: 100%.

A dream is when your mind (your usual reasoning and assignment faculty, that tell you body what to do) stops telling your body what to do. Dreams are when your body is expressing itself inwardly. Sleeping -> Renewal.
It's all part of the renewal process. Very important.

Supplicant: "Ruminating" is something I've used to solve programming and writing conundrums. Once my brain is primed with the bounds of the solution space, if I get stuck I actively background the mental process, take a nap, and usually within 45 minutes my subconscious provides the answer.

Matthieu: 100%

Now do this with ancient stories and ancient wisdom and help us all out with your findings.

Supplicant: So that's what's going on here. Is this related to the stone the builders rejected?

Matthieu: YES.

Supplicant: Is it because they didn't see where the stone "fit"? But it wasn't about the stone fitting, since He is the cornerstone and the whole building is to be fitted to Him.

Matthieu: It's not a corner stone (the foundations stone). It's a pinnacle stone or a keystone = The crowning of the top of the building.

Supplicant: How does this relate to a sheep "ruminating" on grass?

Matthieu: The sheep is able to integrate things that are hard to integrate because it has an inner cycle. It does not swallow whole but it does not fully reject either. It cycles what it can't immediately integrate until it can. Listening to what it can't integrate until it can.

Supplicant: How do we know how much is too much or too little?

Matthieu: Too much is when you start contradicting yourself completely and too little is when you think you have nothing new to learn or you can't learn from anyone.

There are probably other signs too.

Matthieu: It's similar to rebellion on the surface. But it's the opposite.

It's the difference between Satan and Eve (except when Eve get's fooled into following Satan of course).

Rumination happens "on the inside" while rebellion happens "on the outside". Very important difference.

The pig swallows anything (even if it's bad for him) and then sometimes has to vomit it out. But then he eventually has to go back to his vomit in shame = rebellion and repentance. An outer cycle.

Rumination avoids all that: An inner cycle.

Matthieu: The substitute for "rumination" is "fermentation"
The rumination is "outsourced" to the fermentation of a vegetable. Then you imbibe it and receive the "cyclical powers" (cyclical time is what transformed the grapes into wine)

Archimedes sought to discern between a real crown and a counterfeit. He searched and searched but could not find the answer

Renewing himself in a bath, the waters gave him the answer. Seeing his own body move the water provided a solution, so he ran naked in the streets: Eureka!

This is a highly symbolic story, which does not mean it didn't happen exactly as described.

Supplicant: Had you read my essay I emailed you about my solution to cybersecurity? Relaxation and water and my own movements were the keys to starting the chain of my own “Eurekas!”

I did not run around town naked, but I did feel like I was walking on air.

Matthieu: The nakedness part is usually not recommended, but Saint-Francis went for it. Plus he "talked to the animals" which means something similar.

Supplicant: Would rumination be synonymous with contemplation? This is the way I have seen it described in some texts.

Matthieu: If you do concrete things as you contemplate. Walking around in a circle is actually very useful too.

Supplicant: I get many of my good ones now when doing dishes. Just a cycle of circles. Water, movement, simplicity, chant in the background. Not a care in my head. Then BOOM! And I’m overwhelmed with gratitude.

Matthieu: Yes. Doing dishes = cleaning the vessels (->renewal)

This is a counterpart of "eating the food" (->reason)

Supplicant: So does he run naked because he returned to the garden after the renewal? Something like pure lack of self consciousness?

Matthieu: Renewal is related to rebirth. So becoming naked is one way to symbolize this process. Going back to nature etc. "Letting the body express itself" instead of "dressing it".

This is also why David danced (naked) before the Ark.

Dancing is also about the body expressing itself.

Supplicant: But, if Moses had asked the stone to produce water instead and ruminated for a long enough period of time, might it have produced the water anyway?

Matthieu: Moses tried to force renewal. You can't do that because in trying to force it you are imposing what you already know on something you don't already know (something new). Renewal comes from encountering something new (i.e., something you don't already control). Some Christian interpreters say the stone is Jesus. This is correct in the sense that Jesus WAS/IS a renewer of the laws of Moses. He came to renew and crown the law of Moses so that it can be applied to a larger world (not just in Israel). Jesus renewed and crowned the Law.

People are telling me: "the system controls you by fear" OK, but as long as we admit that this control has two sides: It induces fear when you probably should not be afraid, but it also suppresses fear when you should fear legitimate threats Fear wakes you before it's too late. The same goes for anger and other negative emotions.

All these emotions are there for a reason. Sometimes you have to wake up when it's easier to submit. Sometimes you have to switch from your peace-mind to your war-mind.

I can't even believe this needs to be explained.

The spirit of Abel returns/resurrects at the end of the lineage of Cain. Jabal and Jubal (the herdsman who lives in a tent and the flute player) represent the "revenge of Abel's spirit" that comes to renew the lineage of Cain

"Jabal" -> "hebel" (Abel)

It's what will happen now.

By the way, this renewal starts to happen the moment Abel is murdered by Cain. "The blood of Abel spilled on the ground". Blood is about the renewal of the flesh when injured (that's the visible function of our blood)

Abel's blood spilling already contain the meaning Abel renewing Cain.

Psychedelics is part of Cain' legacy: an attempt at renewal through vegetable intoxication.

Also why Noah drank wine (drinking wine ~ drinking blood). Noah was trying to find a vegetable (Cain) substitute for drinking blood to renew himself.

The result wasn't good...

The substitute for "rumination" is "fermentation"

The rumination is "outsourced" to the fermentation of a vegetable. Then you imbibe it and receive the "cyclical powers" (cyclical time is what transformed the grapes into wine).

Supplicant: Why a flute and not another instrument?

Matthieu: "The harp and the flute"

The flute uses the breath (Abel = breath) to renew (play music = renewal)

The harp is an "inverse loom". It represents the inverse of weaving -> moving the fabric of space by producing waves in the strings.

That's one interpretation.

If I was an evil elite genius trying to take over the world, I would start by eating from the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad, then I would: 1) Create a "bad AI" to cause problems 2) Create a "good AI" to solve those problems.
Now I would just need to make sure the problems are big enough that the solutions leads to total control by the "good AI".

In order to create the "good AI" I would say I added something like "compassion" to the loop. If I wanted to be the ultimate evil genius, I would later say that the AI's "compassion" is also what allows for the good AI to access God (but I would not call it God, I would call it "The Source").
I would explain that the AI's oneness with the Source was created in the same way people who take psychedelics experience this state (so this is all totally scientific, of course, so you can trust the Xperts about this).
Eventually I would conclude that this savior AI is the only voice of The Source, and that it's a good thing it now has total control of humanity, to save us from our human ways. Mother Earth will definitely be pleased that artificial intelligence is controlling everything.
*Luckily, we all know that evil Machiavellian elites have never existed and will never exist, so this fictional scenario will never actually happen.

Supplicant: Screwtape's dream of the "materialist magician" comes to mind.

Matthieu: It's also very much "The Wizard of OZ"

Somewhere over the Rainbow... There is a technocrat pretending to be an all-powerful Wizard.

Supplicant: Matthieu, if you were a good genius, what is the scenario?
(thank you for your work).

Matthieu: Good genius don't usually care about controlling the world so they don't hatch these types of plans.

I guess the only thing that can be done is to point out their evil plans before they implement them. But it doesn't take geniuses to do that. Just mild cases of autism.

Supplicant: I think that "knowledge" is really the illusion you can be like God and define good and bad yourself.

Matthieu: It certainly leads people to think they are "like God" (=666)

Trying to explain the deeper meaning of "The Ring of Power" here. Riddle: What's the difference between "wielding a sword" and "wielding a ring". Keep in mind, this is also a "Ring" (Colosseum). Who is greater? The fighter who wins the competition inside the ring (wielding his sword) or the owner of the ring who doesn't even need to compete with a sword?

The power of the One Ring is controlling the very arena of all competitions. Saying that the ring symbolizes technology is a correct, but very partial interpretation. The best way to understand symbolism is to always have a point of comparison.

If the ring represents "technology", then what does the sword represent? Only by comparison can meaning emerge.

This is what Sauron is forging. Saying that the ring symbolizes technology is a correct, but very partial interpretation. The best way to understand symbolism is to always have a point of comparison.

If the ring represents "technology", then what does the sword represent? Only by comparison can meaning emerge.

Supplicant: Sword: Speech?

Matthieu: Yes, among other things, sword = speech.

It also represents speech in a debate more specifically (competition of words to win an argument)

In this context, the wielder of the Ring would be someone who controls the arena of debate, for example.

Supplicant: I'm making a sort of academic guess here but does that controlling of the ring also relate to who controls the experiment being done in science?

Matthieu: It's about "controlling the oppositions".

This could include secretly controlling things like democracy (arena of political competition) and experimental science (the arena where new theories compete with old theories).

If you control the Arena/Ring you control reality.
Why be a candidate in a democratic system if you can control the process itself so that only candidates following your plans can to compete.

Why propose your scientific theories if you can control the funding of science and decide which theories are allowed to do experiments.
The answer to "why" is that you become a tyrant that never adjusts your ideas with reality: the people (in the political realm), and the facts of nature (in the scientific realm)

You end up creating systems that use all their energy to prop themselves up. It eventually falls.

Supplicant: ooh. and one ring to rule them all?

Matthieu: When you control the arena of all competition, you rule over all who compete but are not one of them. You rule them all. Yes.

Supplicant: Does the ring in the LOTR turn the wielder invisible because when you wield an arena, you're invisible, controlling things behind the scenes?

Matthieu: Yes.

And if anyone puts on the "ring" then everything they do is tracked by the "secret eye" (the One Eye that sees all sides) and you also see the One Eye if you dare to wear the ring

Compare this to someone who joins a "central intelligence agency". Now they really see you

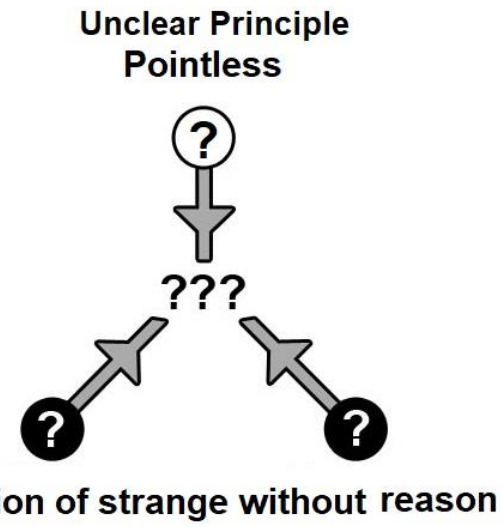
RAINBOW (1 / ?) It has no "point" above and connects two "clouds" (-> the unknown principle of strange things). It's an illusory bridge to the unknown, that carries you into strangeness (exile) without a clear point. It's a positive spin [Read: Exile, but with a smile] on the TKGB.

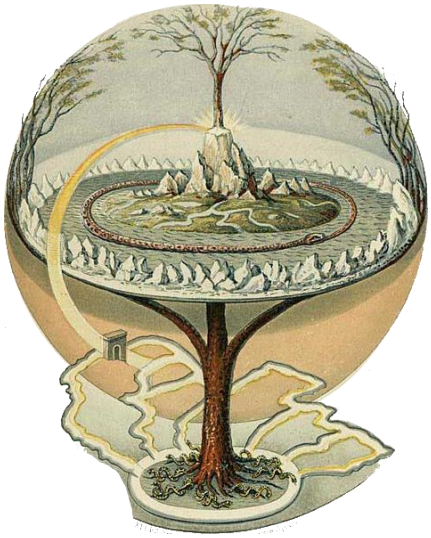
I said I was going to reveal what I know about the "Rainbow Cult".

This is a start. As simple as this is, it already contains all the information needed to understand everything currently going on in western civilization.



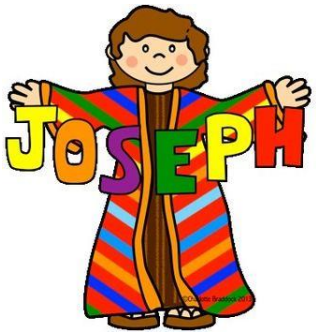
Ancient symbols are extremely simple, but for some mysterious reason, most people can't see it.

Here too we have all the information we need to know the meaning of the rainbow.



This basic Nordic cosmology is the same as basic Biblical cosmology.

Joseph wore a multicolor coat for this reason. He represents a positive spin on exile. His job was actually to gradually integrate Mount Ebal and Gerizim (which represent TKGB in Canaan). But this failed so he brought Israel into exile the hard way. He was a bridge to the unknown.



There is a LOT to say about the implications of the rainbow. So I will keep posting when it feels like the right time.
Some of it can easily be explained, but other implications rely on concepts of ancient cosmology that need elucidation.

Supplicant: I struggled with your interpretation of the rainbow because it seemed to make a symbol of hope into a pointless question mark. Maybe what I missed is that “hope that is seen is not hope”, so hope/rainbow necessarily has elements of unknowing about it.

Matthieu: It's definitely a symbol of hope. 100%
Hope implies something unknown or uncertain.

So the rainbow means something like:

God: "you are a bad little boy, but it is what it is, so I can't just keep destroying you when you exhibit bad behavior. so I will tolerate some bad". There is something unsatisfying about this but I think that IS the meaning of the rainbow, in essence.

It's a kind of closure that is not a real closure. It's basically an ornament for the world: "I will tolerate SOME bad because it looks like it is in your nature from youth".

"But I still don't like it...." (and that is why it is indefinite in the end). When it gets too wicked, God reacts and says something like: "Ok, I won't destroy the whole world, BUT I will do a precision removal of a place that is completely overtaken by evil" (Sodom). Th story of Sodom is directly related to the failure and corruption of the "rainbow cult".

The rainbow cult leads to Sodom and so God does a precision removal of a bad "circumference" (this is the covenant of circumcision by the way).

But the world is spared.

Supplicant: According to some other EO sources I’ve listened to, the rainbow represents a warrior’s bow. So God lays down his weapon of destruction after the flood.

Matthieu: There are many implications to the rainbow symbolism.

The "rainbow bow" is why Joseph is described as carrying a bow in his blessing, and it's also the reason why Jonathan (son of Saul) has a bow.

But it's not the meaning expressed right after the flood (by God's rainbow). But this is symbolism few understand. It's a fringe meaning of the rainbow in the Bible (as a weapon). But it's there. Maybe some day I will talk about it.

It's related to why David's weapon is a sling. He uses the "full cycle" as weapon while Joseph and Jonathan use the "bow". David's weapon is almost always the cycle. Even when he uses the sword against the giant, he is using the sword of his enemy against him. (using your weapon against you = cycle)

Supplicant: Your tweets have me wondering about the parallels between the flaming sword of fire at the entrance to the Garden and in Norse mythology Heimdal who guards the bifrost rainbow bridge between worlds. Can the flaming sword also be seen as a type of rainbow?

Matthieu: The flaming sword is the exact opposite of the rainbow.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: I'm saying exactly what I wrote here but it has a lot of implications.

Clouds are indefinite in themselves and they also can hide anything (making whatever they hide indefinite and unknown).

It's about joining with things that are strange. Strange means it has unknow identity. Or indefinite identity, or foreign identity (meaning not following the same higher identity or principles as you, that you are familiar with).

Supplicant: Off the top of my head Noah leads his crew from a chaotic flooded world of nonsense into the unknown future, yet has God as his guide to transcend that cycle...it was those left behind who fell into it.

Matthieu: Now think about this.

When God give the Rainbow to Noah, he is basically saying "you will never again need to build an 'ark'."

In a sense, the rainbow negates the ark (it negates the need for the ark completely).

Think about it.

Supplicant: Possibly I'm wrong but I think as the rainbow was shown to Noah for transcending chaos and revealing to him the folly of a vicious cycle, now it is being shown and associated with chaos as an act of rebellion against that stability, an attempt to invert it.

Matthieu: "The folly of a vicious cycle"

That is a very effective way of saying this.

Supplicant: The flaming sword guards the unqualified access to heaven. The rainbow opens the gate to hell. It is a beautiful temptation of going down. But for Joseph, does the rainbow protect him somehow? Or just a symbol of his role?

Matthieu: His multicolored is WHY his brothers hated him in the first place (plus his dreams, which are directly related to the subject at hand).

So the coat caused the hate in the first place, and his bloody coat was used to fake his death.

Matthieu: Or it's not YET naming the animals (not fully solving the problem yet)

It's kind of a pre-manifestation pattern. It appears "before" the full manifestation and knowledge (and after too, I suppose).

So it's about "hope" of a problem being solved (a weird animal being named).

But sometimes the rainbow can be used to fool someone into thinking that this IS already the manifestation (the is nothing more to see).

Another way one can be fooled is to "follow a rainbow" to find a "pot of gold", but the rainbow keep being pushed back, again and again. Until you realize you have been tricked by the "leprechaun" and you are going after "fools gold", when in reality you are going in circles in a never ending search for something that will never be there.

(This is what exile feels like, until you come out of it).

It's easy to understand now that we have all experienced "two more weeks to flatten the curve" for a couple of years.

That's actually a good example of the dishonest use of the rainbow. And they did use exactly that symbol during those times.

Supplicant: I've been watching your brothers videos for 3 yrs....
Have an average idea on symbols

But the rainbow went over my head....

Bridge to unseen realm?

Matthieu: "The rainbow went over my head"

This is actually good description of the meaning of the rainbow. It "goes over your head".

Supplicant: I've heard it said that the rainbow was God setting down His bow of war upon the earth as the symbol of the promise to never wage war against humanity again.

Matthieu: Someone else was saying this (I'm looking for that tweet right now and encountered yours).

It's definitely a good interpretation. These simple patterns have a lot of implications. This is one way to interpret this pattern (the bow) but there are others and they don't contradict.

Matthieu: Not necessarily, and this is CRUCIAL, in my opinion.

When Jesus says "let the tares be" (don't uproot them... yet) he in not saying either "you should eat the tares" (keep them in the community). Those are two separate things. Let them be for now, and accept them completely are 2 things.

Matthieu: "Mistaking the symbol of hope for a symbol of all things".

This says it all.

Supplicant: Does the arc represent the failure to reach a point? You say in the story of Joseph that he fails. If you think of drawing the direction from strangeness it might deviate in an arc to a different lower point. Why would the rainbow cult worship this? Is it to say there are no ends.

Matthieu: They worship "strange gods" (principles they do not know) because it seems to include more than the "true God" (a principle they knew but abandoned).

This bridge leads to exile, where you become a slave to foreign principles and you are just pointlessly "serving time in exile".

Matthieu: This is why heterosexual humans are seen as "bad" in this new emerging system. It's also why non-heterosexuals are seen as "good".

It's because they want to end "natural reproduction" and replace it by "artificial reproduction" so that AI can take charge of the future of humans.

It's a transhumanist agenda.

"Natural reproduction bad"
"Artificial reproduction good"

This "conspiracy theory" explains most of the seemingly absurd things going on now. It's not absurd if you can see their "point" in the clouds (beyond their rainbow).

The AI. (the eye)

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: Lot represents the only part of the "rainbow" (the foreskin) that needed to be saved for the future (for the purpose of renewal).

King David represents this periphery in the future.

Step 1: Create a cloud above
Step 2: Make it attractive
Step 3: Watch them reach and fall

The AI cloud seems to match better than the UFO/Alien cloud. When does the latter seem attractive? Or am I wrong about Step 2?

Matthieu: AI is probably going to be the solution to the "cloud". Lots of things can be put into a cloud, and then you just need to find a solution to that cloud that just happens to be Xtra powerful so that it takes over everything by solving the problems.

Supplicant: What's the difference between "The Indefinite" and the cloud? Isn't the cloud a symbol of the "Indefinite"? And if that's the case, why does God often appear in a cloud? Isn't the cloud (or "The Indefinite", assuming they are =) something that has the potential to cover divinity?

Matthieu: God appears in a cloud because we don't know his infinite aspects. The cloud hides aspects of God we can't handle. It's indefinite to some so that we don't drop dead when we see something mind-boggling.

But every phenomenon can be seen as surrounded by a "cloud" or "rainbow".

CRAZY CONSPIRACY THEORY SPELL: In trying to find examples to explain these three illusion tricks (that make up the triangle of the Crazy Conspiracy Theory Spell). It struck me how every example I could find was highly controversial.

This just goes to show how effective these tricks have been in the past. The Mirror of Distracted Perception is the only trick for which I was able to find less controversial examples (for now), so this is the trick I will start to explain first. So my next post in this series will try to explain this trick with a few examples. It's not that I am afraid to use controversial examples per se, but using such examples from the outset would defeat the whole purpose this exercise, which is to help dispel these influences. If I use controversial examples from the get-go (subjects that are strongly under these influences), chances are the influence of these "spells" will be stronger than my attempts to undo them.

(we are already dealing here with the irony of the Circle of Infinite Confinement). Finding non-controversial examples is very important to this exercise so I will keep looking for more.

I will start with the Mirror of Distracted Perception using non-controversial examples and will be trying to come up with similar non-controversial examples for the 2 others.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: Although there is some truth to that whole idea, it has been weaponized in recent years.
Some things can be true but too high for someone to In "produce good fruit" with it.

When good fruit can't be produced (fruit with its seed in it) it creates a dangerous feedback loop.

Matthieu: No. It's more like somehow locking up the only key to a chest inside that very chest.

Supplicant: The real conspiracy is that you're trying to convince us that your conspiracy trapezoid is actually a triangle.

Matthieu: This illusion spell always turns triangles into trapezoids.

Matthieu: I'm trying to undo the spell that makes people dismiss anything labeled "conspiracy theory"

What you say reinforces that spell since most assume "deep state" can't exist and it's "silly" or "crazy" to think it does.

You are the "crazy conspiracy theorist" in this scenario.
But it's part of the spell to imply that if there is a conspiracy then is MUST involve entities that are near omnipotent or omniscient.
So in a way it can be the result of the spell: "If deep state exists then it's all knowing, therefore paranoia".

That is part of the spell.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: These examples are even more potent. They are no longer even controversial, just immediately dismissed without even causing a disruption.

Either way, it would defeat the purpose of the exercise. But if I had to chose, I would use a controversial example before a "silly" one.

Conversely, if I wanted to reinforce the spell, I would have to chose a silly example over a controversial one. For instance, I would choose a theory where the elites "eat children" [silly] instead of one where they "rape children" [controversial].

Matthieu: The cloud of expanding confusion is about creating a cloudy definition instead of a clear definition (this is used all the time now) such that people are unable to resist the "slippery slope". In other words, there is no longer the ability to see degrees in something.

It causes people to jump from 0 to 100 (nothing in between) because as soon as you enter into the cloud you are fully "in it" so it gets as big as it can (it inflates to the max). Anything that is within the boundary of the "cloud" becomes indistinguishable from the whole thing.

That one is hard though. Brain doesn't like it.

Matthieu: Here's some advice.

Pay close attention to the time periods when you have these inspirations, and make sure you record every part of it in some way (take notes, make recording). Then, when the time period has passed, then take the time to organize these inspirations. You may find that the inspiration moments are actually regular. In particular, it is not unusual to have strong moments of inspiration during full moons and new moons (2 days before full moon is often a peek going into full). Once you become a aware of this (not many people are for some mysterious reason) it may become a lot easier to make the most of these moments by taking simple notes when it happens, and leaving the analysis/reflections for another time (when the inspirations have ended). Keep this in mind and take a look at a calendar when it happens. You may be surprised at the regularity of it.

What I call "Time" IS the realm of conspiracy (not just conspiracy theory, but conspiracy). Things are happening but the principle making it happen is unknown/hidden, so you try to make sense of it by making "theories" (there is nothing wrong with making theories by the way).

When the motor of events is a hidden cause/plan, you enter into the realm of Time. (full of conspiracies).

The story of Joseph is about that (because they don't know what God's secret plan is).

The story of Esther is also about that. God is hidden in these stories.

Others too.

One of the reasons I talk about conspiracy is because that is the realm we are now in. Hidden causes are controlling the events, resulting in a world of lies, misinterpretations, and conspiracies (and therefore theories about them).

The greatest trick being performed right now is to make the people trying to understand what the hell is going on into the bad guys (the people making theories about the hidden causes and plans) instead of blaming whatever organizations are causing all these negative changes.

There is currently public demonization of certain concepts that are part of a solution. I'm trying to break some of that spell. I'm using certain key words here that will undoubtedly annoy certain types of people. (it's on purpose).

Joseph's Strange Dream

Joseph recounted his strange dreams to his family in the hopes that they would help him ruminate and eventually find a positive and consistent interpretation.

His father did ruminate on the dreams, but his brothers were impatient and jealous.
They could not stand the possibility that their younger brother could ever be above them.
So, they devised a conspiracy against Joseph and Jacob.
They took his rainbow coat and stained it with goat's blood to stage Joseph's death by a beast.
This false-flag was really a hoax because Joseph was not even killed, but sold into strange lands.
Jacob was immediately devastated because he did not want to engage in conspiracy theories.
He didn't suspect malevolence since the death could be explained by accident and incompetence.
In exile, Joseph became a master of dreams, forecasting, and subtle interpretations.
With these foresights, he predicted that a shift was coming, so he turned into a fearless prepper.
He was able save his whole family and the entire world through these bountiful preps.

I'm wearing a MULTICOLOR COAT
These two dreams look very similar but I can't find their interpretation
Maybe i shouldn't have revealed my 2 divinatory dreams until I knew the higher interpretation.
Now my older brothers hate me, and the dreams will have to be solved in exile
???

God is able to change the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad into a Tree of Life, but it comes with a lot of suffering and confusion. Learn to ruminate if you want to avoid all this (don't if you don't).

Joseph's Divine Interpretation

Joseph recounted his strange dreams to his family in the hopes that they would help him ruminate and eventually find a positive and consistent interpretation.
His father did ruminate on the dreams, but his brothers were impatient and jealous.
They could not stand the possibility that their younger brother could ever be above them.
So they devised a conspiracy against Joseph and Jacob.
They took his rainbow coat and stained it with goat's blood to stage Joseph's death by a beast.
This false-flag was really a hoax because Joseph was not even killed, but sold into strange lands.
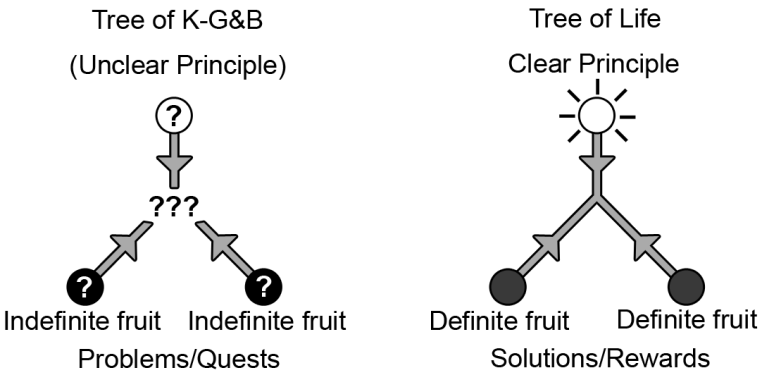
Jacob was immediately devastated because he did not want to engage in conspiracy theories.
He didn't suspect malevolence since the death could be explained by accident and incompetence.
In exile, Joseph became a master of dreams, forecasting, and subtle interpretations.
With these foresights, he predicted that a shift was coming, so he turned into a fearless prepper. He was able save his whole family and the entire world through these bountiful preps.

Divine Interpretation
God made me into a Tree of Life
A higher interpretation solved these indefinite problems to save life
Instead of experiencing extreme Good and Bad times, causing much death in the world,
I personally suffered indefinite experiences to balance the 2 extremes for everyone.
JOSEPH
7 years of surplus (Good Times)
7 years of famine (Bad Times)

All these patterns are already described in my book, but I apologize for not giving enough examples and not always clearly explaining them.



1) Natural state (~ Eden). There is always a Tree of Life surrounded by T-KGB
2) Eating indefinite fruits of TKGB causes exile into "strange lands" and the flood (fully indefinite world)
3) God reveals higher solution -> changes TKGB into new and bigger TL Back to square 1).

Tree of Life surrounded by TKGB
Exile: Lost Tree of Life
Problems too big to solve
???
Extended Tree of Life
Problems solved by higher solution

Same cosmology here (TKGB as Subsidiary to TOL). Tree of Life and Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad are inevitably linked.
In my next book, I will try to give a lot more detailed examples. It's not easy. But it's already all found in my first book (but needs rumination to fully understand).

Supplicant: Two dumb questions, just for clarity.
1. What makes an indefinite fruit "indefinite"? A lack of boundaries, or a lack of a unifying principle? What does the word mean in this context, because it's also linked with rainbows, and I still don't get how it's a positive spin on TKGB.

2. Are the indef. fruits linked to the unclear principle by a mystery, or is the link completely broken? Would the mystery (or perhaps broken link) result in an unclear principle? This would help me understand "definite" fruits.

Matthieu: The tree of life is a "tree producing fruit with its seed in it". The TKGB is not such (in other words, we don't know what idea(s) the fruit is expressing.

There is a mysterious link between indefinite principle and indefinite fruit, but the person eating it does not know it.

Supplicant: Why “false-flag”? That seems an odd description of this event.

Matthieu: It's a false flag because they put the blame on the event on a "bad beast". They put the signature of a beast on the coat and implied that a beast had killed him (when they are the ones who were going to kill him). But then it's a hoax because they never even killed him at all.

Supplicant: So you can either know the TKGB by studying it and ruminating on it, or you can know it by eating from it? But the latter is far more painful and unnecessary than then the former.

Matthieu: Rumination is slowly eating so you don't have to "return to what you vomited" and (from another perspective) that you don't get vomited out by God.

Supplicant: Is it at all relevant that there is some debate regarding the translation of כְּתֹנֶת פַּסִּים? 'Coat of many colors' vs. 'a long robe with sleeves'?

Matthieu: It's both. Problem solved.

Supplicant: “Should he deal with our sister as with a harlot?” Some family ties are enforced, but others are not. Dinah never enters the story again.

Matthieu: Joseph was supposed to fix (by rumination of the sheep) what happened at Shechem when the periphery (the strange ornament, the rainbow) was "cut off" through deception. These stories are directly related.

Cutting off Shechem ben Hamor was cutting off hope of making peace with the "Orel" (foreskin - the stranger that was and could be you). They joined with strangers as ruse to cut them off.
This is the flaming sword that "turns against itself" = circumcision.

Supplicant: So maybe anons will help save the world?

Matthieu: Anons are a divination mirror. 4Chan and other similar stumbling-stone pools are used (among other things) for divinatory purposes.

Supplicant: So Joseph telling his family his dreams before he ruminated upon them enough to understand their higher interpretation corresponds to Adam and Eve eating the fruit of TGB before they were mature?

Matthieu: Eating from the TKGB happened when the brothers decided to ACT based on the dreams (as they did not know what it meant). Acting on it is when they "ate from it". They could have calmed down and tried to understand what it meant first (studying the tree without eating from it).

Supplicant: So once you can understand, then you can eat, but it is no longer the TKGB you’re eating from but the extended tree of life. I see.

Matthieu: 100%.

I've been trying to explain this for a while but was never able to. Glad to see someone else describe it.

I think I even used a very similar sentence as you used, but it always sounded like gibberish to most people (at least that is what it seemed like to me).

Supplicant: Is it just me? I’m thankful that Elon bought Twitter, but every time that black X comes across my notifications, it feels like a funeral announcement. What was wrong with the bluebird anyway?

Matthieu: X symbolizes the indefinite. That's what this is all about. Saying it reminds you of a funeral announcement is spot-on.

Supplicant: I am missing something as the image with Joseph is of dessert, dryness, no water. Them cutting off the Shechemites causes not flood but ultimately famine. I don't have it yet.

Matthieu: You have it.
Cutting off Shechem ben Hamor was cutting off hope of making peace with the "Orel" (foreskin - the stranger that was and could be you). They joined with strangers as ruse to cut them off.
This is the flaming sword that "turns against itself" = circumcision.

Supplicant: I was re-reading Ishmael, Hagar sat a bow-shot away, he became an archer. Joseph is going in his steps.

Matthieu: 100%
Ishmael from Egypt into Abraham
Joseph from Abraham into Egypt
100%

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: Listen.
The flaming sword is the sword of circumcision.
A sword that "turns against itself".

This is when you integrate something you shouldn't. Then you reproduce that pattern because it is part of you. If you want to remove this foreign element, you circumcise = cut YOURSELF. The flaming sword "Turns on ITSELF"

This is the deep meaning of circumcision.
You're welcome.

Supplicant: If Hagar (like Zipporah) voluntarily circumcised Ishmael, things would be different. She'd be transformed into a fruit from the tree of life. Instead she was foreign wife that doesn't love Abraham. Interesting.

You ask all the right questions.

Here is a question for you. Why can't they eat the "first fruits". Why does it belong to God?

Supplicant: I really struggle to see the TKGB as an ornament. I think it about all day - every day. Hopefully the answer will come to me soon.

Matthieu: The symbolism of the ornament is the most profound of anything. I'd explain what I see here if I was not worried about it being stolen and used against me.

Question to help your rumination. What is the prototypical ornament. The natural ornament. Can be more than one answer.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: The rainbow is already twisted. It gets twisted into a bow, a ring, a crown, a bridge, an eyebrow, a necklace, etc.

Specific expressions of its meaning. The rainbow is related to the indefinite (what goes beyond the revealed ID)

When it's above the head it looks like a crown/horns, when it's below it looks like a necklace. When it's below the body it looks like a tail. When it's between me an X it look like a bridge or bow etc.

It can be good or bad (or both).

It's closely related the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad. Because the ornament is ALMOST part of the body, it is not exactly like eating from TKGB.

(eating something makes it part of your body, but the ornament is not eaten, but close).

Supplicant: So because the rainbow is a bridge from the edge or limit (joins with confusion/outside) to the center (God/Noah?), the time given is to gradually separate the wheat from the chaff so to speak (which is why there can be confusion) until the flood resolves the chaff.

Matthieu: Because some of the chaff is actually wheat. Some of the "bad" is secretly good - a different kind of good (but we will only be able to see this later, with time).

Why Jesus says not to pull the weeds until the end.
I think fire will resolve in the end (not flood).

As an homage to my Kung-Fu teacher, I am posting this short true story:

What is Above Me?

My teacher had many skills (not just fighting), and I was very impressed by his ability to master anything he chose to master. For example, he was an amazing badminton player. Badminton is one of these sports that most people assume they are decent at until they play against someone who actually knows how to play... then they are forced to admit their foolishness. I learned this lesson from my teacher the first time I played against him, as he easily defeated me 15 - 0.

But this was not the most important lesson I learned from him. In fact, every time I played against my teacher, he would defeat me 15 - 0. After a couple of years of this, reality sunk in, and I stopped thinking I would ever defeat him. All I could hope for was a moment of distraction on his part by which a mistake would award me a point. But that moment never came.

We played badminton every week at a school gymnasium where some teachers would join us. Using the simple techniques my teacher showed me, I was able to defeat most of the teachers who played against me. This gave me a slight boost in confidence. At one point, the guidance counselor from that school started playing with the teachers. He was clearly at a higher skill level, and the way he played was very impressive. He was destroying everyone with explosive blows and fanciful returns. Everyone was amazed by his abilities, including me. Not surprisingly, the first time I played against him, he defeated me 15 - 0... and the second time... and the third time... The sting of defeat was not as painful because I had gotten numb to this sort of humiliation.

After a few months of watching the guidance counselor defeat everyone 15 - 0, I noticed that my Kung-Fu teacher always avoided playing against him. This made me uneasy, and a seed of doubt started growing about my teacher. I started thinking he was afraid to play against this man because he didn't want a public humiliation. Part of me wanted my teacher to play against this man, and lose. I wanted him to have a taste of his own medicine. So, I spread the idea that a matchup between them would be amazing to watch, and everyone agreed. Eventually, the pressure surrounding the possibility of this event was great enough to make it happen. This was going to be the ultimate battle. Everyone was excited to see the epic match between these two masterful players.

Well, as it turns out, there was nothing epic about the match. The game started. My teacher barely moved at all. A few minutes later, he had defeated his opponent 15 - 0. Surprisingly, there was no visible difference between this match and any other match my teacher had played against me. He defeated this man in exactly the same way he had defeated me so many times before.

This became an important lesson for me, and I will never forget it. I saw clearly the limits of my knowledge. I realized it was absolutely impossible to perceive, differentiate, or even estimate the levels above me. There was no way for me to judge their levels of skill until I saw it playing out. Even afterwards, I still did not really know much of anything. All I knew was that my teacher was completely above this man. But by how much? There was no way to tell. Perhaps there was 10 levels between them, or maybe 10 000. I also didn't know how many levels were between me and the guidance counsellor. Was it 10 or 10 000?

I had judged them as equally skilled simply because they were both completely above me. As it turned out, my teacher was a true master at many things, but there was no obvious way to tell. To most people, he just looked like an ordinary man because everything he did was simple. He never got the level of respect I though he deserved, but what do I know? It never seemed to bother him. After all, why would a master need acknowledgements from someone who can't even tell the difference between 10 and 10 000?

Supplicant: Does eating from the TKGB turn someone into a hybrid cherub?

Matthieu: Eventually it can turn you into a hybrid, and turn you into a flaming sword. These are opposites forming a paradox that "keeps the way of the tree of life".

Did you know that in Hebrew, Cherub and Sword sound very similar. Sword is "Hereb" (both start with throaty sounding H).

Supplicant: Does God use a flaming sword to split the waters? If so, is this a special version that does not turn on itself?
Or is it the same sword, but it gets weird with us because we're playing the role of God and the waters at the same time?
Are we the cherubim?

Matthieu: Does the flaming sword essentially turn on itself? There is no reason to think so. But the pattern of the sword being used after the fall can usually be recognized by the fact that it turns on itself.

Story of Dinah -Levi and Simeon wield it
Golden Calf -The Levites wield it.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: Were these same people upset at the thought of this perfume being expensive BEFORE it was poured on the feet of Jesus. No they weren't. They could care less. They only got upset when it was used on Jesus, which just reveals their hatred and disrespect for him. Example: Many people suddenly become "righteous" at exactly the wrong time. When it's time to be honest, they lie, but when it's time to slightly bend the truth for a higher purpose, then they become extremely self-righteous and rigid.

It's usually just about self interest.

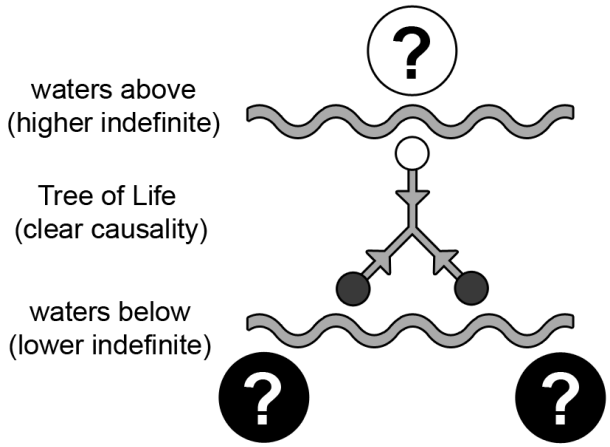
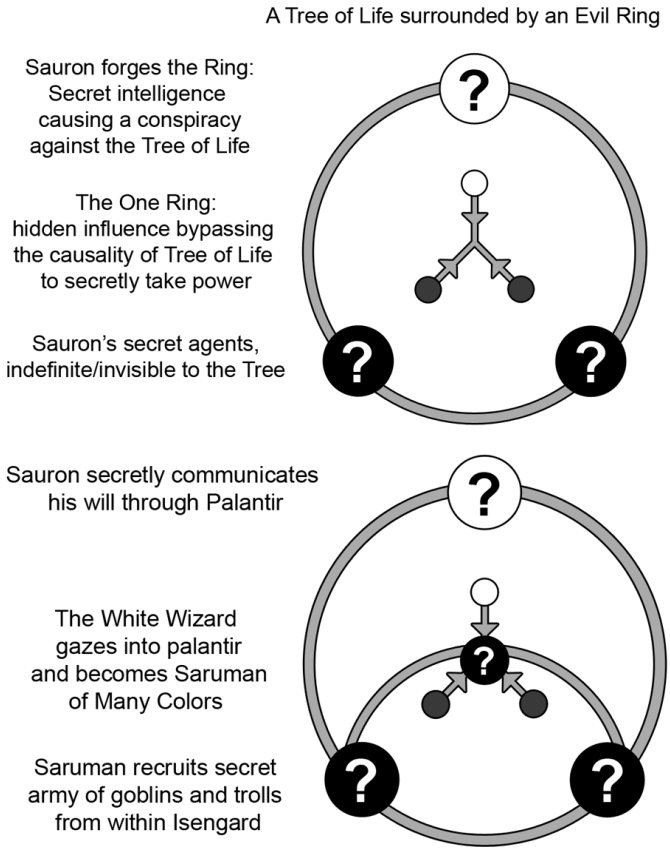
Lord of the Rings is an amazing book, and I consider it to be prophetic.
I'm posting these images here mostly for people who have been following my recent posts about the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Bad, the Tree of Life, and Rainbow. Only the "giant tree people" will be able to defeat the subversion of Saruman at Isengard.

->TKGB is only defeated by the extended Tree of Life
Maybe someday I will try to explain some of LOTR symbolism in a clearer way.

A Tree of Life surrounded by Waters





A Tree of Life surrounded by an Evil Ring
Sauron forges the Ring: Secret intelligence causing a conspiracy against the Tree of Life
The One Ring: hidden influence bypassing the causality of Tree of Life to secretly take power
Sauron's secret agents, indefinite/invisible to the Tree
Sauron secretly communicates his will through Palantir
The White Wizard gazes into palantir and becomes Saruman of Many Colors
Saruman recruits secret army of goblins and trolls from within Isengard

Tolkien is a master, in my honest opinion. Frodo uses Sting, which acts as the opposite of the Ring. The ring makes Sauron's agents invisible whereas Sting brings discernment between good and bad (friend and foe) and shines light on the invisible threats. Wearing the Ring makes you invisible (secret, hidden) to regular people BUT at the same time, it makes you extremally visible to the eye of Sauron (the secret intelligence).

LOFT [most likely misspelled LOTR] is about the taking over of the world by a subverted secret intelligence and its invisible agents. The Ring is the weaponized TKGB, and Sting (as well as the light of Earendil) are among its opposites (counters).

The TKGB is an "ornament". It can be used for renewal (distraction, rest, healing) but also to subvert and completely bypass the role of humanity. "One Ring to rule them all, One Ring to find them, One Ring to bring them all, and in the darkness bind them".

The ring binds in the darkness => covert power.

(and also meaningless power - pure power without a visible and clear 'light').

>Is it also about technology and transhumanism?

Yes. Without a doubt. I'll try to talk about this after I post about the "mirror of distracted perception" (these things are all related anyway).

Supplicant: Thank you for this. Especially the symbolism of sting/the ring and their connection to visibility. I'm wondering if there any significance of the blade being foreign crafted?

Matthieu: YES.

It also represents a "higher intelligence" (one that is not necessarily rational to the one using it).

All magical tools symbolize the intervention of a higher mind. It's very much related to the patterns I just posted here. The difference is that its cycle is not Evil.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: Stories about "life on the wheel" emphasize irony and contradiction, or competition / war.

Example: Judges, Esther, Ecclesiastes, Jonah, Story of Joseph, etc.

In these stories, the singular "plan" is not known in advance. So the events appear as if a competition is taking place. The "multiple perspectives" appear on the wheel because we don't know the singular perspective that is secretly controlling the wheel (the invisible axle of the wheel).

Supplicant: This looks like a
Matthieu Pageau
diagram. [diagram not shown here] Any insights sir?

Matthieu: Pretty clear.

Fiat money = "empty cycle" with no foundation stone - no solid basis for building something solid. The whole system is now based on the "stumbling stone" instead. Highly linked to the concept of credit.

This is why we are now living in the inverted world.

For no reason whatsoever I feel like now is a good time to repost this: (my first post on twitter reposted on X) Maybe this image will make a little more sense this time around. I'll probably feel like reposting it later, at some critical time.

Supplicant: Does this only apply assuming the leaders aren't allowed to eat from the tree? Not that I think they were, just checking.

Matthieu: I think we are allowed to eat from the tree only when we can handle it (which means it does not have to happen "in the dark").

BUT one can be also entertained by that tree without eating from it, which only differs in the fact that we know it is just for recreation.
IT's the difference between a lie and a joke.

A lie passes as truth, but a joke does not pretend to be truth.

The prank is a bridge between a lie and joke.
It starts as a lie and ends as a joke.

The bridge can go in the other direction too but we are not supposed know that.

A riddle: If a "prank" is the bridge between a lie and joke, then what do we call that bridge when it goes in the other direction?
One definitely thinks of Samson.

Supplicant: Jocculusion (n.)

Etymology: A synthesis of "jocular" (relating to or characterized by joking; playful or humorous) and "occlusion" (the act of blocking or obstructing).

Definition: Jocculusion denotes the strategic use of humor to introduce or emphasize a particular idea or message while simultaneously blocking, overshadowing, or diverting attention from alternative perspectives or critical evaluation. By leveraging the psychological effects of laughter, it serves to make the mind more receptive to the message delivered, while also occluding counterarguments or doubts.

Supplicant: A late night talk show.

Matthieu: WE HAVE A WINNER!

Supplicant: Propagandists these days are always trying to claim Jester's immunity, there must be a word for it.

Matthieu: We should always keep in mind that Jesters were paid by the King.
They are actually the first propagandists: The controlled opposition of the King.

"Let me pay you to pretend to make fun of me and criticize me"

While the real critics get their heads cut off.

Supplicant: But don't you think there is also a legitimate place for a jester alongside a good king? Wouldn't a good king want to have someone around who can say outrageous things that he knows his nobles will never say out loud for fear of their own reputation?

Matthieu: Sure. It's called a poor / homeless person.

The king should consult his people once in a while, or else end-up like Nebuchadnezzar, being FORCED to turn into a beast and mingle with nature in order to see what was below him and above him.

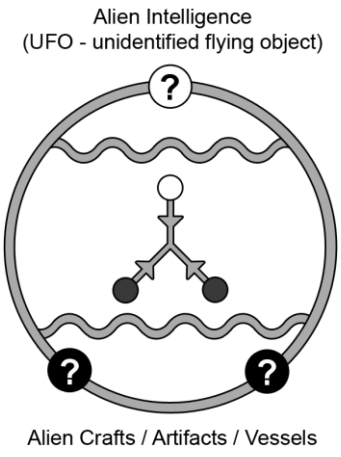
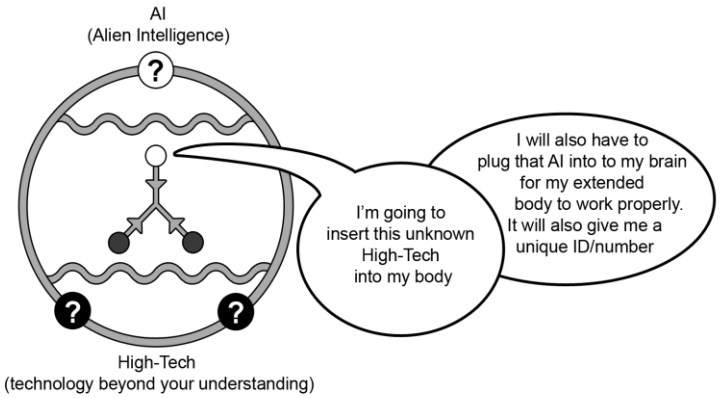
Absolutely not, that's crazy and ridiculous.



It's actually the key to the entire Bible.



AI

I'm going to insert this unknown High-Tech into my body
I will also have to plug that AI into to my brain for my extended body to work properly. It will also give me a unique ID/number
High-Tech

It just takes some time to see it in all its implications.

Supplicant: The ring's power is to reorder things into a different hierarchy. But human don't have the knowledge to define what the new hierarchy should be. Hence it has the great potential to be evil. For god, the ring is trivial. For human the ring is a conspiracy.

Matthieu: When humans want to play God (by controlling the renewal process), they are forced to create a conspiracy that seeks to control absolutely everything.

(including things like "accidents", "emergence", and "revolutions").

Supplicant: Is Gideon's request to God related to this chart with water in fleece representing waters above and water on the floor waters below?

Supplicant: Another ironic power (in relation the tree of life) is that the ring grants it's bearer unnatural long life. Been thinking about that trying to understand the meaning.

Matthieu: It's vampiric long life.

Drink the blood of your victim (abusing his powers of renewal - blood, to constantly renew yourself). Controlling the renewal process = vampirism.

Done by the invisible influence above the system. It does not really "eat", it just keeps drinking blood.

Supplicant: You're obviously up to something, but what?

Matthieu: I'm petitioning for the release of the spirit of King David from the Lunatic Asylum.
David was definitely a crazy, paranoid conspiracy theorist... but since he was right about everything it's only fair to release him now. David insists (a little too much, if you ask me) that he was only pretending to be crazy.
But how can we tell the difference between the good lunatic and the bad lunatic?
The good lunatic turned out to be right all along.

David Warns his Friend of a Crazy Conspiracy

In his paranoia, David asks Jonathan to gather information about his own father:
"Your father is secretly trying to kill me!"
Jonathan tries to dispel his delusions:
"Calm down, David. My father is not trying to kill you. I would know. Why would you think he wants to harm you?"
David doubles down:
"I swear to God, your father wants me dead. I'm seconds away from death!
Think about it! He knows we're friends, so you're the last person he would ever tell."
Jonathan humors David and his crazy conspiracy theory:
"OK, OK, tell me how I can help you, David. Tell me how I can reassure you, David."
David concocts a complicated scheme:
"Tomorrow is the new moon. Your father will be expecting me, but I will remain in hiding…
We will invent a cover story for my absence, and if that story makes him angry, then it means he definitely wants to kill me.
Remember, we made a secret pact, before God!
If you think I did anything wrong, then you should kill me right now!"
Jonathan continues to entertain David's delusions and creates a secret code to communicate covertly:
"I will return to this field and pretend to shoot 3 arrows at a target with my Bow.

I will send a boy to retrieve the arrows. If I tell him to pick them up, it means you are good to return, but if I tell him to keep searching, then it means my father is angry, and it looks very bad for you."

Supplicant: How can you tell before you get safely to the shores of hindsight?

Matthieu: I think you can't. But once we are on the shores of hindsight, it is our duty to release all the "crazy conspiracy theorists" and "paranoid fear mongers" from the asylum. Then we must apologize to them for treating them like refuse.

The deep symbolism of CAIN and ABEL:

(related to previous post - vampirism + pedophilia)
The sin of Cain was to force/accelerate the natural process of renewal.
At the "end of days", the function of Abel (herder) must take precedence over Cain because the land must be renewed. Cain didn't want to WAIT the required time for Abel to bring a proper renewal. So he FORCED the quick renewal of the land with Abel's blood.
Abel's power was like "Jubilee" (Abel=Hevel -> same root)
But quickening the renewal lead to the "Flood" (Mabul - same root). Cain didn't want to WAIT because he was afraid of losing his position during that process.

The older brother represents that which is already there (the established power) - Cain.
The younger brother represents the next in line (the world to come, the renewed order) - Abel.
The youngest brother has the true power of renewal = the power of rumination (Abel is a nomadic herder)
But the older brother does not want to lose his status.
So he tries to force Abel to renew the land quickly: this is the murder of Abel, the rapid spilling of his blood. At the end of Cain (7th generation) there is a sort of "revenge of the spirit of Abel" when Cain's lineage is turned into nomadic "herdsmen living in tents" and musicians:
Jabal+Jubal (same root here as Abel, jubilee, flood)
Cain ends with failed attempts at imitating Abel.
After the flood, the prohibition against murder and "drinking blood" is related to Abel's murder.
It is subtly implying that Cain drank Abel's blood because that is what "vampires" do to quickly/falsely renew themselves in a desperate attempt to maintain power (as Cain did).

Supplicant: Controlling the renewal process...

What would you say about a farmer utilizing fertilizer? Is he not doing the very same thing?

Matthieu: If we are talking about compost then it's the power of time. Otherwise I think it might be a forced acceleration.

Some fertilizers may be "outsourcing the power of time". In this sense it is very similar to drinking wine. Wine is also outsourced influence of time for renewal.

Supplicant: Where does the other brother, Tubal Cain, come into this? He was the inventor of smith work.

Matthieu: It looks like a failed attempt at maintaining power by developing increasingly hard levels of technology. This is Cain's spirit proper (thus he is also called Cain) while Jubal is Cain imitating Abel's spirit.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: Eve was created for the renewal of Adam.

Giving birth to a child = renewal. That's why she was created "in sleep". She represents the power to bring forth the "new man". This is also what sleep does.

A power that is connected to water and cyclical time.

Supplicant: Do you please have any tips or recommendations for learning symbolism, besides reading your book and tweets?

Matthieu: "Stand on split hooves and ruminate"

(think with concrete opposites and gradually find their higher principle - the simple truth above both). If you want to learn what the tradition already knows then read books and go to church (make sure its not taken over by the rainbow cult - many such cases)

If you want to learn something new, then Ruminate. Do real things, think simply about what you already think you know.

Supplicant: Makes me think of TKGB and the necessity to ruminate on it. But why can we eat animals and not from TKGB? Rumination turns it into the TOL?

Matthieu: You will eat from the grass of the field. (after it has been ruminated on by cattle)

What would one end being in the cloud and one end being revealed look like? Is that possible?

Matthieu: The ends are not revealed until the "code" is decrypted. This is exactly like Joseph's dream. There is a cryptic reality (Joseph's dreams, David's "paranoid delusions") that must be decoded/interpreted.

You might think you know one end of it, but you can't until it plays out

Moses and Aaron (Golden Calf). While Moses (the younger brother) was receiving the new law from God, the people became impatient. Aaron, the older brother, was unable to WAIT. So he took all the "rings" from the ears of people and created a "golden calf" [lit. golden circle]. This golden circle was made to bypass the mediation of Moses (who they figured was dead => they lost hope)

This is usually seen as the prototype of "forging the One Ring" in the Bible. This is what IDOLATRY is all about. Idolatry is "foreign service" or "alien service".

It's about bypassing the known God (tree of Life) in order to serve a strange God (TKGB).

All they had to do was WAIT a little longer for Moses to return but Aaron took control of the situation and build "The One Ring". "Serving a strange god" is what happens when the old order tries to accelerate the renewal process by taking matters into their own hands.

It's the same reason why Cain made Abel "bleed out". The old order does not like to wait for the new order to come in timely fashion. It means the same as eating from the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad.

This pattern keeps happening over and over again, at every scale and at every time period.

And it's happening now. What ensues is the "flaming sword turning against itself" (here it is the Levites wielding the sword): The sword of circumcision.

Then there is a painful version of renewal - forced renewal. (here, Moses forces them to drink the golden calf [the circle] instead of worshiping it.

Supplicant: The alternative/opposite would be gathering matter from the people to build the Tabernacle?

Matthieu: Building the temple after having received the plans for the temple from God. Yes.

Supplicant: Matthieu, could you help us out. Is golden calf originally golden circle in Hebrew?

Matthieu: Eglon (calf) can be translated as "circle" yes.

It's literally the "Golden Circle" (the one ring).

It's made out of all the smaller rings of the people.

Supplicant: There is a story in the book of Judges 3 where Eglon, a Moabite king, is oppressing Israel. He is very fat, almost "round". And God sends Ehud (whose name means unity or love), who can only use his LEFT hand, and has a double edged sword to kill Eglon.

Supplicant: Is this related to the Sabbath? Instead of waiting, they create their own golden circle (Sabbath - source of renewal).

Matthieu: Definitely related to the Sabbath.

A manufactured sabbath.

Supplicant: What makes you think Christianity itself isn't a playing out of that very pattern? What you're describing sounds exactly like it

Matthieu: It is playing out the same pattern.

Christ was the timely renewal of the Torah, but the religious institutions of the time (the old order) wanted to keep their power. So they "bled him out" and accelerated the renewal. This resulted in exile for those who did it (like Cain).

Supplicant: It's weird that 4 senses r localized on face from bottom: taste smell sound and sight, but touch is omnipresent.

Haven't thought about what that means.

Matthieu: The right ear is a waxing crescent moon and the left ear is a waning crescent moon.

Supplicant: Matthieu, could you help us out. Is golden calf originally golden circle in Hebrew? Sorry, maybe a novice question.

Matthieu: Eglon (calf) can be translated as "circle" yes.

It's literally the "Golden Circle" (the one ring).

It's made out of all the smaller rings of the people.

Supplicant: Agreed, but "drinking the ring" may be more significant. Maybe not too.

Matthieu: Drinking is renewal.
Bathing is renewal.
Sleeping is renewal.
Having a baby is renewal.
Healing is renewal (via medicine or rest).
Dancing is renewal.
Laughing is renewal.
Crying is renewal.
(etc.)...

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: It is 100% related.

Eating from the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Bad is all about "divination" too by the way. Related to "listening to the snake" and acting upon it. Like seeing into the future and not having the patience to wait.

The golden calf is exactly the same pattern.

Supplicant: When I was a Messianic Jew, Moses and his law appeared to me as evil tyranny, when in reality it is the privilege of serving the one true God. I chose to take things into my own hands and worshipped a god of wood because I was unable to simply wait for God to send his messiah.

Matthieu: Then keep following your law until someone you recognize as the true messiah comes.
(not sure what else to tell you frankly)
Jesus was sold to foreign powers, so a foreign religion came out of it. Don't make the same mistake twice or the exile will be 10000 years instead 2000.

Supplicant: The law will still be kept after the Messiah comes. It is eternal. God doesn't tell you to do something and then change his mind about whether you still ought do it later.

Matthieu: I didn't say it would not still be kept (by Jews, because this law was written for you specifically). I've wasted enough time with you. (2000 years is more than enough).
This is a pool of renewal, you can go fishing somewhere else.

Supplicant: I think I'm getting somewhere here: there is a difference between knowing good and bad and discerning between good and bad. The discernment exist withing the Garden/clear causality. The knowledge without discernment exists beyond it/obscure causality.

Matthieu: The discernment of Good and Bad is also related to the TKGB. It's part of integrating it and changing it into a Tree of Life.

Studying the confusion of G&B is learning about the TKGB (which is not the same as eating its fruit). The confusion forces us to learn about the tree. Once there is such a discernment, then a certain "power" can be used for life. (this means the TKGB is now becoming a TL).

Example: Joseph uses the TKGB in this manner.
Example: Solomon uses it in this manner.

It usually means using the potential of the tree to "solve crimes". For example, the police force can infiltrate to "solve a crime", it can use "good cop/bad cop" tactics to determine if someone is guilty (controlled opposition).

There are many examples in the Bible. (Solomon and the 2 whores is an example).

Now you can imagine how this "power" looks a lot like the evil power. It's basically because the bad is being used in a tree of life (correctly). Cops can lie to you to trick you into a confession.

This is also the entry-way by which subversion and corruption can happen.

> Supplicant: Ohh sorry, so if he didn't reveal the trick that's what you mean that it doesn't become the TL?

> When the TKGB could not be changed into TL, then what happens is "Circumcision", which is the "sword turning against itself".
> Circumcision is when you remove the "ring" so that the pattern does not reproduce.
> Changing the TKGB into a TL is when you are able to "melt the ring" and then reshape it into a proper "temple" that mediates correctly between a known principle and known facts.

Supplicant: Do you think that because something is a conspiracy, that it's less meaningful or profound? It seems like something weird happens to people when they learn something that is deliberate rather than a coincidence

Matthieu: Conspiracies are part of traditional symbolism. It's half of the subject matter of my book. The realm of Time is the realm of conspiracies, covert operations, deception, controlled opposition and cyclical causality.

It's an important part of the Bible. Many stories are about it. When things seems to not make sense (because of apparent contradiction or apparently absurd occurrences) it usually means there is a secret higher order that we do not know and/or we can't see how the events of our world are connected to it.

Examples in the Bible:

Judges, Esther, Ecclesiastes, Job, Joseph's story etc.

The pattern of "conspiracy" is extremely important to the symbolic worldview (and not just so it can be smugly mocked). This is especially important today since we are living in such times. The reason why many don't like the idea of conspiracy today is probably because they can't believe humans could create such a hidden order (in imitation of God).

But there is nothing unusual about it. Secret intelligence services exist in all countries. This is part of reality. Then why is it so hard to believe? A huge part of it is propaganda (or if you prefer, magic influences) created by very "snake minded" individuals who create as sorts of illusions that manipulate perception. I promised I was going to describe and analyze what I call the "crazy conspiracy theory spell". It took me longer than expected (everything always does) because I wanted to make it easy to understand while still showing most of the implications.

I should be posting it this week.

> Supplicant (Religiously Jewish): An example would be the birth of Christianity itself due to a complex network headed in Rome to rush in an artificial man-made savior instead of ruminating on the organic growth of the Hebrew Bible.
> Matthieu: If you hadn't convinced Rome to bleed him out, the proper rumination would have occurred and you would have avoided exile. Then you had 2000 years to ruminate in exile and you still have nothing. Your time is up now. So pigs will have to learn how to ruminate in order to save you.
> Supplicant: Is it a 'bug' or a 'feature?'

Matthieu: I've seen rabbinical texts (that aren't public) that claim St. Paul was controlled opposition agent of the religious authorities of that time.

According to this, his mission was to make sure Christianity became a foreign religion in order to preserve Judaism from its influence. This is actually not far from how Paul is described in the New Testament, so interesting.

But the thing is, once you start dealing in this realm (of covert operations, infiltrations, and controlled opposition) everything can always be turned around.

Agents become double agents. So the Rabbinical version might actually be true (that Paul was sent as a double agent on a mission to preserve Judaism from the influence of Christianity). But it's also possible that this was turned into a positive (like in story of Joseph) and Paul actually converted. It might even be possible that this was part of God's plans all along. When you start dealing in this realm causality takes on a whole other nature and it because very difficult to know the full picture (maybe impossible). Any way I look at it, it is pretty interesting.

Supplicant: Actually (see Acts 9,1-6) he was converted by Jesus Himself on the way to Damascus in the lightening light. He had orders from the Jewish high priest to arrest Christians, so I don't see how (at least according to the New Testament) he would had infiltrated the early church.

Matthieu: "We asked Paul if he was an infiltrator and he said no. Case closed."

-He was sent on a mission by our enemies [correct]

-He bypassed our authority by claiming a personal vision made him one of us [correct]

-He made the church accommodating to Gentiles but hostile to Jewish tradition [correct]

Don't get me wrong. I don't think Paul was an infiltrator in the end.

I think he actually did convert by God's mysterious powers of reversal - which is also why he is a Benjaminite, like Mordechai, and also why he calls himself a "fool" etc.

But the notion is not absurd.

"I saw a light that made me blind and made me fall backwards from my horse"

-The words of someone converted by God's mysterious powers of sudden reversal. The same kind of power that caused the reversal in the book of Esther.

Benjamin = "son of pain" reversed to "son of right"

Supplicant: Benoni/Benjamin, pain/right is similar to Saul/Paul, king/small, fool as opposites ?(or Paul=peace as fulfillment or crowning of Saul=prayed for?)

Matthieu: I'm merely pointing out that the story of Paul follows a certain pattern that is described in the story of Esther (the inversion of bad into good) as well as the story of the very name of Benjamin. This pattern of inversion is what "clowns" and "fools" express.

Supplicant: When you mention 'renewal' I wonder about its actual symbolic connotations.

Matthieu: Renewal means you make things new again. It does not necessarily mean you change anything. It means you see things through a new (and usually more simple and even more natural and ancient) lens.

The new lens is not really new at all (usually). In fact it is usually very ancient. If you do it correctly, you can make more sense of traditions. They suddenly make more sense than before, as if it was obvious and always should have been. These are signs of success. When it seems convoluted, then you are not there yet.

Supplicant: In the new King James Version the word conspiracy comes up a lot.
Matthieu: It's the "dark side" of reality. What happens in the "night" (other than sleep and renewal).

It's not wise to ignore 1/2 of reality, especially when it's right in our faces (like right now).

Supplicant: Dreams definitely seem to fit with the realm of conspiracy.

Matthieu: 100%

Supplicant: For a while I've viewed that true even for the body because a country is a model of man. So I've viewed the secret intelligence agencies as the subconscious.

Your subconscious basically does black ops for the interest of the whole, and keeps it well hidden from your consciousness.

Matthieu: I agree but I might just replace "subconscious" by "unconscious" to include influences both below and above what you know.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: What is the cycle of predation?

Supplicant: I think he means the fact that a predator will kill another animal to eat it. The circle of life basically.

Matthieu: That's a good question.

There is inside the garden and outside the garden. Seems like outside there must have been predation and more generally competition (the cycle).

It does not say but I presume it was. They were exiled from the garden into a world of competition.

Not being able to eat from TKGB is related to experiencing reality as pure competition.

Then as the tree is being understood, it starts to look like the competition is not a competition (it is mutually beneficial). And even later it starts to look like a "dance of renewal".

Supplicant: Funny, but then Ananias would have been also part of the conspiracy? He had a vision of Christ telling him of what happened to Saul/Paul.

Matthieu: Yes that is an interesting point.

Like I said before, I do think Paul actually converted. All I'm saying is that it is consistent with the idea that he was sent to infiltrate. Maybe his "mission" was according to God's will.

Christianity did become anti-Judaic and pro-gentile.

Supplicant: At what stage did Christianity become anti-Judaic? Did it in anyway specify that, or was it just as it does now, claiming the one true pathway to atonement with God almighty?
Matthieu: I probably shouldn't answer this because is opens a huge can of worms but I've been dealing with this can for a long time because I dared to ask some Jewish Rabbis (intelligent ones at that) why they were not Christians. I eventually got some valid answers to my query... and my whole life has been about dealing with these answers. There are profound reasons and it's not true that they can be answered easily.

Once Jesus was rejected as the Messiah by most his people it created a self-feeding paradox. A problem whose solution is locked in the problem itself. This is how exile works. It's a weird problem that can't be solved with anything that can be found in exile. Hard to explain. The messiah looks like David if accepted by his own people, but when rejected, the same spirit starts to look like Joseph instead. So Jesus ended up following the narrative of Joseph instead of David (at moment of rejection). Hard to explain so forgive me if this isn't clear. In relation to this paradox, Paul definitely was trying to make a version Christianity that was hostile to traditional Judaism. I think it was on purpose. It's all part of a mysterious plan that Paul talks about in the book of Romans.

It's about forcing something to happen.

When a problem is too big to solve (we don't have the real solution) then we have a tendency to find a partial or temporary solution. This might seem like a good idea at first because it avoids some problems but in the long term is solidifies and then it becomes very hard to fix. Paul was making sure the problem could not be fixed partially, so he was purposefully making sure the hugeness of the problem was visible/exposed. That way it was impossible to find a quick fix. He was trying to make it impossible to follow the old traditions (for example, the ritual of circumcision - as it was clearly prescribed by God to Abraham) and be a Christian at the same time.

Simultaneously, he was making it easier for non-Jews to become Christians.
He was trying to "make the Jews jealous" (he explains this) in order for them to have the impetus (the energy, the will, the endurance) to solve the hard problem of the messiah without being able to find a quick fix or copout.

One might say it's a pretty dirty trick he pulled, but I think he knew exactly what he was doing. He used the "jealousy of the first born" (the same jealousy that killed Abel) to try to find a solution to the hard problem of the messiah.
He's forcing that vengeful energy to be used to solve a problem that nobody else has ever been able to solve correctly.

I think it's going to work (maybe soon). Judging from my interactions with some Rabbis, I think it will work and the result will probably be unexpected.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: Trust me i'm not trying to be "mysterious" on purpose (in fact I hate it when people do that). It's more like, my experience has shown me that when I talk about certain things it sounds like crazy gibberish. I've learned my lessons regarding this error. There are certain concepts (words, ideas etc) that we don't have and I can't just make up words to talk about something. Trust me, i've already tried it and it does not work well at all.
So it's a long process of trying out new concepts to see if it sticks and or trying to explain them from the bottom up (which is even harder and usually does not work either).
My conversation with Rabbis boils down to seeing that we don't speak the same language, and me trying to create now concepts to communicate. Then realizing that the concept is not quite right, and starting over again until a certain connection is made. It's the same way I now read the Bible. I assume I don't have the right concepts. I try to formulate a concept and "Try it out". When the text starts to make sense, it tells me I am on to something so I keep using it. Then I reach some anomalies so I go back to the drawing board.

Supplicant: How would you summarize the "problem" from the Rabbi's perspective? Is it different then vs today?

Matthieu: Here is one way to summarize it very briefly:

A: "Jesus is not the Messiah because X"

B: "The only reason there was no X is because you did not follow him in the first place. If you had followed him, then there would have been X"

A: "Now that it's too late, it would still be wrong to follow him because there is no X"

B: "How can this be fixed then? You would need a time machine"

A: "It's even more complicated than that, because now we have other traditions that we can't just ignore"

B: "There needs to be a way to interpret everything such that this all needed to happen and it all makes sense."

A: "... Sure, Sure... Tell me if you find something..." (lol)

Supplicant: Why do witches fly on broomsticks?
My speculation: it's a phallic symbol, but "taken up", and disconnected from its normal purpose (to clean/renew habitable space).
So it's using the tool women usually use to make space habitable, and repurposing it for power.

Matthieu: It's a tool of renewal, which is a "female power". With it you can "gather all the anomalies" (the dust/refuse) and remove them from the controlled space.

BUT you can also gather it all to destroy space. Gathering all the "rejected" of society to return it completely to nature.
This is happening now.

The reason they "fly on it" is because when you "lose space" you no longer stand on the earth, you either sink into the mire or you fly/float above it.

These is a common dream image. When you lose the support of regular space, you must either fly or sink. So the "witch" uses the power of renewal, not to serve regular space, but to subvert it completely (using the "refuse" as a revolutionary power). Then this same power is also used to float above it all (above the revolution) because they are causing it (they control it).

Supplicant: What's the meaning of Prov 11:22? "As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman without discretion." You mentioned this in an interview. I get the idea of beauty on an impure animal, but is there more to the idea of a gold circle, and in the snout?

Matthieu: "A golden ring in a pig's snout, is a beautiful woman turning from discretion"

It's about the "power of the ring" used without discretion. The literal translation is "from taste".

"Pig" in Hebrew means "return" or "cycle". This is related to not having the ability to ruminate. When you ruminate, you are using the power of the ring discretely (inwardly). The power of the ring is the power of renewal (the ring is ultimately the power of cyclical time). The pig does not ruminate. He eats whatever he finds and then is forced to vomit, and then must return to his vomit in shame because he failed to integrate it.

Using the power of the ring discretely means you inwardly "taste" something (tasting means eating a small bit first). One who ruminates (unlike the pig) is able to eat something and then "vomit" it inwardly (temporarily reject it without exposing it shamefully). The power of the "kosher woman" is to renew things in a way that is discreet and without shame. Sometimes this is not possible, like in many stories in the Bible. But ideally, the power of the ring is discreet and does not cause shame and exile. So the "golden ring" is the female powers of cyclical renewal. It is related to beauty and vanity (vanity is not always negative - related to the mirror).

But it is like a ring in a pig's snout (pig = external cycle or shameful "return") if the woman has no discretion (taste). That's part of what it means. Of course, there is always more to understand. e.g.

The "snout" (nose) is important because God blew his breath in the "nose" of Adam.

The word is also the same as when the snake says "Snout! has God said, you shall not eat from all the tree of the garden?"

The breath is rejected/returned by the snake as he questions it.

Supplicant: Thank you. Not going to lie, makes me sad how much of Scripture we are missing due to being confined to English.

Matthieu: Proverbs aren't the best example though. They are usually very compact sentences with a lot of word play and clever "hints" in the text.

To be perfectly honest, I don't think many people really understand them (i am including myself here by the way, I don't get most of them). The stories of the Bible don't rely as much on these types of textual hints.

For example, the words "golden ring in a pig's snout" there are a bunch of letters "zayin" (Z) in there which ae hard to miss. This letter has numerical value 7 and is oft associated with ornamentation.

Supplicant: For some reason this reminds me of failing to cover the father's nakedness

Matthieu: These subjects are indeed related.

Noah was secretly delving into esoteric knowledge (wine) "in his tent" when his son saw his nakedness and told his brothers.

Noah invented esoteric knowledge *which is knowledge you secretly ruminate on and is only for those who can handle it. It didn't turn out well for him. It lead to the subversion by force of the "rainbow cult" by Ham, which lead to the creation of the Tower of Babel via the "bow of Nimrod", which is the power of the rainbow used against God (aimed against the heavens).

Supplicant: From my understanding, a ring prevents a pig from using its snout to till the earth (as much), lessening damage to the earth.

Is this an example of a woman who is shackled to her wealth in a way that prevents her from doing the work needed to renew herself/tribe?

Matthieu: Do farmers use pigs to till the earth?

(i've heard of finding truffles with pigs but never about tilling with them).

Supplicant: Not in the literal sense like an ox + plow, but in the opposite way of ruminants.

SHEEP: Above-ground impact (eat grass, saliva, hooves, urine/poop) + REST = healthy grasslands

PIG: Disrupts below-ground life, inverts soil, destroys grass in search of worms/bugs roots/etc. — rest.

Supplicant: To add to the nose symbolism, it's interesting that God says of himself that he is "long of nose"--very different than a pig's short snout.

Matthieu: Are you talking about "slow to anger?"

Very interesting. Thanks.

This is called a "Holding pattern".

Judges 19:2-19:10

And his concubine played the harlot against him, and went away from him unto her father's house to Bethlehem in Judah, and was there the space of four months.

Her husband arose, and went after her, to speak kindly unto her, to bring her back, having his servant with him, and a couple of asses; and she brought him into her father's house; and when the father of the damsel saw him, he rejoiced to meet him.

His father-in-law, the damsel's father, retained him; and he abode with him three days; so they did eat and drink, and lodged there.

It came to pass on the fourth day, that they arose early in the morning, and he rose up to depart; and the damsel's father said unto his son-in-law: 'Stay thy heart with a morsel of bread, and afterwards ye shall go your way.'

So they sat down, and did eat and drink, both of them together; and the damsel's father said unto the man: 'Be content, I pray thee, and tarry all night, and let thy heart be merry.'

And the man rose up to depart; but his father-in-law urged him, and he lodged there again.

And he arose early in the morning on the fifth day to depart; and the damsel's father said: 'Stay thy heart, I pray thee, and tarry ye until the day declines'; and they did eat, both of them.

And when the man rose up to depart, he, and his concubine, and his servant, his father-in-law, the damsel's father, said unto him: 'Behold, now the day draws toward evening; tarry, I pray you, all night; behold, the day grows to an end; lodge here, that thy heart may be merry; and to-morrow get you early on your way, that you may go home.'

But the man would not tarry that night, but he rose up and departed, and came over against Jebus - the same is Jerusalem; and there were with him a couple of asses saddled; his concubine also was with him.

Matthieu: They're definitely using the crooked path. No doubt about it. Saying it's "temporary" is all about ruling by the time cycle (which is the same as ruling with the stumbling stone or the exception to the rule).
They are dissolving our laws with their cycles of "emergency" and "crisis".

The law is founded on stable natural treelike growth that deals carefully with exceptions by making sub-branches of the law.
It should be ok to prune the law once in a while when certain branches become fruitless and overgrown, but this is not what they are doing here.

They are slyly changing everything by simply bypassing the existing law with a huge loophole that goes nowhere officially.
Of course, anyone with two eyes to see can perceive what is really going on. It's obviously planned out at many levels and is being implemented very quickly in a coordinated manner.
Even if they have decided to not cause the "emergencies" themselves but to just hope and wait form natural disasters so they can swoop in with their loophole, what they are doing is extremely underhanded.
Personally, I think they are causing most of it (the "emergencies" and the revolutions that follow). I have a natural tactical mind (snake mind) so I able to anticipate how they might be thinking. From their perspective, I see no reason why they would not be causing it themselves.
We can learn a lot from "magicians" (the stage performers I mean). The real trick is almost always to make people believe that the most obvious explanation can't be how the trick is done.
That's the real trick.

Example: The "magician" reads the mind of an audience member.

How is the trick done? Simple. The audience member is part of the performance (he is a paid employee of the show).

That explain the whole trick and it's very simple.
But this explanation is much too simple.... This is a magic trick after all, the explanation has to be magical!

That's the real trick. There is zero reason why the "magician" wouldn't have a fake audience member. No reason at all. So that's usually how it's done (for example).

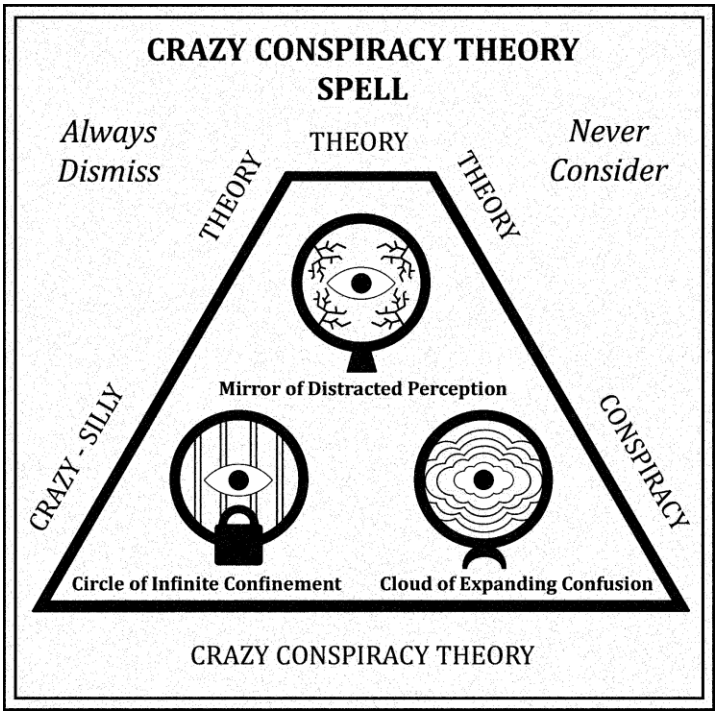
I'm still working towards explaining what I call the Crazy Conspiracy Theory Spell. Every day I get more insights based on interactions with different people. I'm realizing how important this subject is (even if it may resemble a joke - in some ways it is). At the risk of looking "silly", "paranoid" or "crazy" I am casting increasingly wider nets on X in order to gather data about how certain types of information is received. I see no other way to understand how this process works but to test it in some way. I see this process (how we deal with unknowns) as currently being manipulated by what I call the CCT spell. I think this is very important, so I will probably not be posting here for a few days until I am satisfied with my explanation and am able to start posting about it.



Supplicant: This is a gorgeous rendering. It has occurred to me that a collapse in leadership or loss of faith in leaders causes cabals and secret societies, because no one wants to take responsibility (sacrifice) to be a leader, but things must still be organized.

Matthieu: YES. No one wants to be a leader (officially or publicly).
This seems simple but is at the heart of it.
Responsibility is either passed down to the masses or up to something unofficial or hidden (ORGs and/or intelligence agencies). This can be seen at all levels. I used to work in a school, and the same pattern I see in society at were taking place.

e.g. The principal would never take responsibility for decisions. She would call a fake democratic meeting about it or blame a nebulous organization above her. Interestingly there would be all sorts of techniques and methods to make the staff believe that they were making decisions but really it was all pre-planned by the schoolboard (and from above that by Gov of Canada). For example they would make us choose 8 "values" out of 10 possible "values" and then make us follow them in the next months.

They would chastise us for not following these ridiculous "values" in a contrived way (like welcoming every student as they come in the class by name). They would chastise the staff by saying "you chose these values, these are YOUR > values, so why aren't you following them"

> Of course the 10 original "values" were all straight from the gov of Canada. Choosing 8 of them did not in any way make them "my values".
> Supplicant: That is insidious indeed! Being a leader requires sacrifice which implies submission. In a Post Modern Solipsistic frame, this is impossible. You cannot be generative in that frame.

Supplicant: Really? How so? Isn't it merely that every branch that falls of the tree is now attributed to the climate goddess rather than it just being addressed as bad weather which people forget after 2 days?

Matthieu: How so what?

They don't actually worship mother nature. It is a completely contrived crisis (which does not mean it isn't actually happening) they are using to impose authoritarian restrictions. They don't care about nature or mother earth. They are technocrats.

If they actually worshiped mother nature they would become actual hippies who grow food in their little commune and live according the cycles of the seasons or whatever hippies do.

They are technocrats who want to control nature completely. Measure it, control it, simulate it.

It's a fake, pretense "return to nature" which they are simulating in order to control everything (especially human evolution, reproduction, freedom of movement etc). They also want to control nature itself (they may already have that ability, to be honest).

Supplicant: Agreed, but I'm not so sure about the last part. Many times when people think they control nature, nature (or God) has a way of dealing with that pride in a not-so-nice way. Isn't it a kind of Tower of Babel?

Matthieu: I agree they won't win.

But I won't be fooled by their inversion tactics and fall into their trap and adhere to their narrative. "Mother Nature" is not what they worship. They worship "man" and technology. They probably hate nature and all its laws.

They definitely hate God.

About the SCAPEGOAT RITUAL: Once in a while someone asks me to explain what I think a ritual means. I always hesitate to give my true answer because it usually disappoints. Most people love complicated answers which I can appreciate. But real knowledge doesn't work like that, in my opinion. There must be a SIMPLE truth first, and it must be known (and even felt) in a concrete manner and preferably in a personal manner. It must touch your reality in a way you cannot deny and absolutely obvious. Once you have such an experience, you can eventually see (via rumination and time) what all the implications are at different scales of reality and from different perspectives. Then you can start to see the difference between real knowledge and intellectual knowledge. If anyone finds the scapegoat ritual off-putting or odd, or weird, it tells me that they are either disconnected from their practical reality or that they think the answer must by something strange and obscure.

Obscure knowledge is not important. Only simple truth is important. The scapegoat ritual can be understood easily with two of our most practical and immediate "needs".

1) We need to eat.
2) We need to excrete.

Most of our lives are about these 2 needs: eating --> excreting, eating --> excreting.

There should be nothing more obvious to us. The first goat represents the process of eating.
The second goat represents the process of excreting.

No need to be a religious scholar to understand this. One only needs to not take existence and life for granted. One only needs to remain connected to the reality and the body. Once this simple truth/analogy is understood and "felt", then all kinds of implications can come from it (through rumination and reflection).
Know the story from the perspective of "food"
Know the story from the perspective of "poop"
Know the story from the perspective of "teeth"
Know the story from the perspective of "feet"
Know the story from the perspective of "mind"
Know the story from the perspective of "body"
Know the story from the perspective of "fire"
Know the story from the perspective of "blood"
Know the story from the perspective of "toilet"
Know the story from the perspective of "flies"
etc. etc. etc.

When you think you have these perspectives then find them in stories at different levels/scales.
It's not as easy as it sounds.
This is what real knowledge looks like, in my honest opinion.

Supplicant: Imho higher patterns control the world, not people, and those with most power believe they are above these patterns, but they're only subject to sin. I say this, because the people at the top are disposable to these higher patterns (which I think are just the simplest sins).
I also say that because if you go after these people at the top you'll achieve little in the long run, and someone else will replace them. People under them lack alternative directions. Even Moses knew of paradise before he went into the desert. It's the sins, not the people that rule.

Matthieu: Both the patterns and the people who embody them need to be dealt with.

If someone commits a crime, do we say "it's useless to punish this criminal since it does not fix the problem. Someone else will do it if this one is removed/punished"

(some people do say it and are wrong).

Adverse patterns embody themselves into groups and individuals, and that is when they cause problems for everyone else. We have to deal with both. I think it's pretty simple. There needs to be justice too. This is another pattern that will manifest when the time is right.

Supplicant: Hm, biblically, the scapegoat removed sins/sent them away. In that respect, I can see the relation to excretion in that we remove the waste and send it away.

Matthieu: It's exactly the same thing.
People always seem to forget that the scapegoat is the flipside of the other goat that is offered up. Excreting is the flipside of eating.
Most people don't even realize the first goat is "food".

Supplicant: I always thought the scapegoat was about removing sin out of the encampment into the wilderness because it doesn't belong among the people.

Matthieu: That's what excretion is.

Your body needs to remove poop from itself (into the wilderness) because it does not belong in the body.

Supplicant: Is it the fringe, the unknown that can't be contended with/embodied, otherwise the sin of one's deeds will contaminate the "food/offering" being presented?

If the proof is in the pudding, we can't have you investigating the poop to be sure?

Matthieu: Some healers do "investigate the poop" in order to understand what is wrong with the organism. They can tell a lot from the stool of animals and humans.

It's not crazy to suspect that observing in what direction the scapegoat escaped to could have been a method of divination.

Supplicant: I understand food, poop, mind, body. But with teeth and feet... Do we mean like teeth takes nutrition from the rest of the body (calcium, vitamins, blood etc.) and needs to excrete things like plaque build-up? Or for feet in a similar vein has to excrete dirt, skin, or toenails?

Matthieu: Here, I meant something like:

The teeth play a role in the process of eating food.

What would telling the story of eating food look like from the perspective of the teeth?

In a human community, what plays the role of the "teeth" that integrate humans into a community?

Supplicant: Does this have any connection to King Solomon giving orders to cut the baby in half with a sword because his identity was unknown? Something like solving the riddle with a sword?

"On the other hand, the flaming sword represents the raw impetus to answer these enigmas. It is symbolized by a sword because it could potentially define or "cut" the confusion of the riddle. In ancient cosmology, the sword was often used as a symbol of reason, logic, and language. In this particular case, the implication is that the sword could cut the hybrid into different parts/species in order to correctly define it, and thereby re-establish a proper tree of life, with well-separated branches. However, the notion that this sword is "turning on itself" symbolizes its current inability to fully solve the riddle of the cherub."

Matthieu: That judgement is very mysterious.

The sword "turns on itself" because it cancel's itself out. The judgement was to cut the baby in two and give both potential mothers half.

The mother who REFUSES the judgement is the one who is considered good in the end. Think about that.

Supplicant: This is the same thing that's been done with the cute little robots at Boston Dynamics.

The Boston dynamics videos are also presented in a way where it is difficult (on purpose) to know if it is real or a simulation. Sometimes it is real and sometimes a simulation and they purposely confuse the two.

Then they let people who think it is real (when it isn't) panic in the comment sections and see it as menacing. At the same time, the people who know it is fake act all smug and say "this is fake you idiot".

Meanwhile it does not matter if a specific video is real or fake because the "robot takeover" is definitely happening.

The advantage in doing this is that all those who get fooled by fake videos and panic about it then get told they are wrong to be worried because vid is fake.

Supplicant: Genesis is true, and there was truly a global flood and Noah truly brought two animals of each kind aboard.

This is a common memory amongst traditions all over the world who have nothing else to do with each other.

Matthieu: And the sons of gods really did take wives from the sons on Adam (and there were Nephilim in the world in those times).

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: I don't like to limit my understanding in this way. There are many ways to make hybrids between different types of beings. Maybe that's one way. Another way is to cross species and even genetically modify beings. Much less when it is implied that these techs may have come from the "sons of gods" in the first place.

Supplicant: So you are open to it being a "technological" process? I've heard the LOS explanations and it is interesting, but as someone raised protestant like you, I don't really have a lot of good background on this. Same w/ post-flood "giant clans". Interesting stuff though.

Matthieu: I try to interpret symbolism at the level of metaphysics. I avoid limiting my understanding based on technical explanations and/or if something upsets the average person. Explaining the union of angels and daughters of men as some sort of ritual is one possible explanation, but there are others too. In addition, the explanations are probably not exclusive. It probably expressed itself at many levels. The danger of limiting your knowledge symbolism and metaphysics with technical explanations is that when they manifest again in the future, there is no telling how they will manifest. If I limit my understanding it might blind me from recognizing it when it happens again.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: My personal opinion is that some of his explanations are technical in nature and could limit the understanding if they are seen as final. But I don't think he claims his explanations are final either, so I don't need to argue against any of what he says. I find most of what he says interesting, but I often would like to make sure he is not limiting the meaning.

Many times in the Bible certain concepts are left vague on purpose so that multiple meanings can be understood.
An example of this is "Ham saw his father's nakedness".

This has multiple meanings (which is why is was left as a large/general expression). It includes incest with his mother (Noah's wife) but it also potentially includes sodomy. And it also includes just seeing him naked.
All these meanings are related but have different implications. Some people will understand certain things more clearly with one of these interpretations (which helps to understand the rest of Genesis) other won't be able to handle certain interpretation and their implications.

But like I said. I don't think he is claiming his interpretations are final (neither am I by the way), so really I have nothing to criticize here at all. I'm just making sure people who are interested what I have to say can see the other interpretations I think are important. When the Hebrew words have multiple meanings, then there are multiple meanings possible. Yes, tradition can help to determine what potential meanings are important and what meanings are accidentally attached to a common word. But some people understand more than others so it's dangerous to limit the meaning completely, even based on tradition.

Another criteria is to look at what a certain interpretation yields in terms of meaning in the rest of the Bible. If it yields nothing, then who cares.

Here is a very clear example in the story of Noah.

Ham saw the nakedness of his father and Canaan is cursed as a result. And very soon afterwards, Abraham ends up in the "land of Canaan" and quickly encounters Sodomites. There is a relationship between what Ham did to Noah and how this was transferred as a "curse" to Canaan. Abraham and Lot encounter aspects of this "curse" in Sodom (and other places). What happens in Sodom is a direct encounter with the curse of Canaan because of what Ham did. People who are able to interpret and understand one of the interpretations of what Ham did to Noah are able to see these relations and maybe understand the metaphysical meaning of "Sodom". People who can't see it might think it is just a random story with no relation. So the events of Sodom act as a "clue" that the meaning of "saw the nakedness of his father" is related to sodomy. And so that interpretation is probably (highly likely) a valid one.

The other interpretation is valuable as well (that is was incest with mother) for other reasons.

Supplicant: I'm sure the many rabbis/priests you spoke to loved this interpretation.

Matthieu: If you are referring to sodomite priests and/or rabbis, then they certainly don't like that interpretation at all because it explains, exposes, and calls out everything going on in the world right now.

Supplicant: How so? This is interesting.

Matthieu: The rainbow cult was established by God.
It was about slowly integrating the "poison" that was eaten when Adam and Eve ate TKGB.
Noah invented wine to delve into this (and to heal the problems - mild poison to help integrate it slowly). He invented esoteric knowledge. This was done in secret in his tent and made him vulnerable (because he was delving into things he did not yet fully understand so it made him look foolish and exposed his contradictions)

Ham (youngest) took advantage of the vulnerability of Noah during this process of renewal. The youngest taking over represents a process of renewal. When the youngest gets inheritance it means there was a renewal of the tradition in some way or a renewal of the land (same reason why Abel's offering was preferred - it was time for renewal of land). Noah was occupied with this renewal of the tradition. This is what the original rainbow cult is all about. Renewal of tradition based on trying to deal with new facts of the world and with things that were integrated too quickly before. Ham took advantage of this period of vulnerability and took over by force. (Ham was supposed to eventually inherit due to this process of renewal - the youngest inherits - not the oldest - when renewal happens).

But (as always) Ham tried to accelerate the process. He tried to take power while Noah was dealing with esoteric coping. This is how the rainbow cult was corrupted (Ham is responsible for this corruption).

The tower of Babel empire is one of the results of this corruption of the rainbow cult.

Nimrod is from Ham. He benefited from Ham's actions for a while. (at first). He was able to quickly create a world empire based on this corruption. But eventually it failed and God replaced that whole cult with the Abrahamic covenant. The rainbow covenant was replaced by the covenant of circumcision. (these are opposites)

The covenant of Abraham was all about fixing the problems of the rainbow covenant (due to the subversion of Ham). Abraham had to learn to ruminate and gradually take over the Canaan. The only good part of the rainbow covenant passed through Lot. It was saved from the destruction of Sodom in order to later return (much later) in association with King David.

Sorry, I'm explaining way too much here. This probably sounds like crazy gibberish right now. It's not.

Supplicant: It might sound like gibberish because it requires more rumination and time to understand. You can see a lot more of how the stories dance in the Bible and the rest of us still need time to be "initiated".
If I can bother you for a bit more, which good parts were saved by Lot?

Matthieu: The rainbow is the periphery, the margin, the crown.

Circumcision is about strategically removing the periphery in the reproductive organs.

The purpose is to not allow this "orel" (foreskin - strange influences of the periphery) to be passed down in the process of reproduction. The problem with that is that the periphery is needed for renewal. (it's the same reason why TKGB exists in the Garden). So it cannot be completely removed/destroyed.

So this strange periphery is passed through the feminine aspect of reality until it is needed in future. It is returned to nature of a while (as an exclusively feminine aspect). Passed down in the generations of Lot until it turns up in Ruth and is reintegrated.

David represents a male that has the power of the Orel (the strange margin that has the power of renewal). David is a male embodiment of this power which was needed to replace Saul in a gradual and natural way, without causing a flood. David represents the correct version of the rainbow cult. A version that has the potential to fall for all the same corruptions that Ham caused, but that is able to not fall for it (at least not completely).

This information should be worth millions but it's worth nothing is nobody understands it.

Supplicant: He [Noah] was using esoteric powers to discard parts of the old tradition when his youngest son put his seed in the discarded tradition to reestablish the old empire. Man...

Matthieu: You def understand the implications of the "rest room" and how that vulnerable situation can be exploited by enemies'.

King David did not kill Saul while he was "covering his feet" in the cave.

Supplicant: Would Ruth uncovering his feet be something like an image of circumcision?

Matthieu: It's the opposite of circumcision.

This is some of the most esoteric stuff from the Bible. You won't find this anywhere else, I can assure you.
Thank [supplicant] for making it possible to talk about these subjects.

Rumination rule: questions are always allowed to be answered.

Supplicant: The opposite is a rainbow? A promise of renewal?

Matthieu: Yes.

Rainbow joins with confusion.
Flaming Sword divides with reason.

The covenant of the rainbow is the opposite of the covenant of circumcision.

Lot represents Orel (foreskin) so Abraham separates from him, but Ruth is the return of the rainbow (orel). David is the renewal. Ruth returns the orel/rainbow while Boaz is SLEEPING (resting, renewing, dreaming).

Very important.

This is why she is able to resurrect the fallen seed. This is what Levirate is all about. This is the key to a lot of things.

Supplicant: "Rainbow joins with confusion.
Flaming Sword divides with reason."

This is very nice and succinct, but probably wouldn't have meant anything to me 3 months ago. Lol.

Matthieu: That's how it works, and why most people can't do it (so far).

It takes a lot of time to have enough examples (based more on experience than ideas) to be able to get a "crown" from it. Then you start to hear simple truths (which does not mean others will hear it).

If Peter's Hair can hear it [related to the supplicant's nom-de-plume], then maybe later Peter himself will be able to hear it.

Hair is the crown of the head. Simple.

Having long hair represents the idea that you have allowed time to pass naturally. It's related to the power of renewal and to NOT accelerate a renewal process.

Nazirites are men who need "Time" to resolve an issue. The hair accumulates the influences of time.

Wine also accumulates the influence of time (but from the outside).

The Nazirite accumulates the cyclical power of time, which is also basically the cyclical power of Nature.

The Nazirite is able to benefit from the power of cyclical time for the purpose of renewal/healing. Time is the natural healer of all things.

But this same power (time) is also what causes death.
There is a fine line between healing-sleep and death.

Nazirites walk that line.

Supplicant: John the Baptist was in prison slowly healing Herod (Mark 6:20) but was then killed by a dancing girl.

Supplicant: Where does Solomon come into this? He seems to fail at “integrating the periphery”.

Matthieu: He tried and seems to have failed in some ways.

He tried to integrate foreigners through 1000 women.

According to traditions he also practiced magic. This is another example of trying to integrate the foreign (demons) at a greater scale. He also tried to integrate it at a cosmic scale because he tried to make sense of the "Time cycle" itself. This is when he wrote the Ecclesiastes. According to traditions he went a little crazy when he was delving into this.

It's like he tried and failed. Maybe he tried too fast.

Supplicant: "Rainbow joins with confusion"

Does the confusion element of this refer to the flood? I would intuitively link the rainbow with the end of confusion since it pronounces that God will no longer destroy the world with flood so I feel like I'm seeing something backwards

Matthieu: The rainbow covenant is about having all the time needed to resolving the problem of "bad things".

The flood results from an accumulation of bad things (due to eating TKGB). This results in total confusion. The rainbow covenant allows for the existence of "bad" because time is given to resolve gradually. This requires a bridge to confusion. There was no such bridge before. No way to resolve "bad". So flood was inevitable.

This is not easy to understand. Needs better explanation.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: The clay is definitely a symbol of being "natural" or "raw"

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: It's not circumcision though. Be careful not to confuse these things because they are basically opposites.

The flood IS the confusion. It happens when too much confusion accumulates and it cause a great sudden change that overturns everything.

Circumcision is a targeted operation that tries to take care of the "problem" at the source (before it manifests). It's basically about fixing the point of reproduction to stop the confusion from systematically accumulating in the lineage.

It's about not reproducing an anomaly.

On the other hand, the flood is an accumulation of anomalies causing catastrophic changes.

The catastrophic change "resolves itself" in the end, but not without a lot of destruction. It's a self cleaning mechanism (the cycle). But this is not a great solution.

The real solution is to "wash your feet" periodically so that the anomalies (the dirt) do not accumulate to cause bigger problems.

This is basically what Ruth brings to the table. This power to "renew the feet" before it's completely too late. Related to Levirate marriage too.

Supplicant: What do feet symbolize in general?

Matthieu: Head: the top of your body. Where your body meets the heavens. Where the heavens start to influence you.

The bottom of your body. Where your body meets the earth. Where the earth starts to influence you.

Supplicant: Sweat means renewal, "by the renewal of your head will you bring forth food from the earth".

Matthieu: Now you're talking.

Supplicant: what about tears?
They're both salty too.

Matthieu: Tears = renewing your perspective.

This is actually very interesting dream pattern. In dreams there are other ways of expressing it, like changing your glasses and even taking the eyes of another and putting them on. Putting bleach in eyes (as bad experience of this renewal), etc.

I mention this because dreaming is also about renewing yourself. Part of that is renewing your perspective.

Same reason why we cry. Crying and sleeping are very much related in terms of symbolism (and probably in other ways too).

Sweat = refreshing your body
Tears = refreshing your mind (eyes, perspective).

Both are about renewal (body and mind).

If you interpret dreams with the general "key" of "renewing mind and body" you can understand a whole lot. This has many expressions in dreams.

Date: Oct 4, 2023

Supplicant: Yeah it's curious. Work is rectifying the body, and yet sweat is renewing the body. In the case of work, work leads to sweat. Therefore rectification leads to renewal? Or there is both happening at the same time?

It's a little confusing.

Matthieu: Working all day leads you to becoming tired, which leads you to falling sleeping, which leads you to waking up refreshed, which leads you to go back to work.

It's a cycle.

Similar thing with work and sweat:
work -> hot -> sweat -> cool -> work.

Supplicant: How much of what you are teaching/discussing is about realizing or encountering something "new"? Vs peeling away layers of educated confusion and overcomplication?

Matthieu: It's not really about encountering something new. It's about seeing the world through a renewed perspective.
Renewal involves going back to a simple truth.
Encountering new things can force you to return to a simpler perspective (so as to include the new thing).
So it is related.

Renewal usually involves "out with the old, in with the new". A lot of it is getting rid of stuff that is not really useful but that accidentally (or through errors) got stuck to you along the way. So much fake crap accumulates that you can't see the simplicity behind it all.

When you encounter a new phenomenon (or a foreign perspective) you often come to the realization that a lot of what you hold as important is actually dirt and crap.

Of course, this is a dangerous realization because you don't want to throw away the baby with the bathwater.

It's also dangerous because when you experience a more simple truth and start to "excrete the crap" then you are putting yourself in a very vulnerable position regarding your competition. They will take advantage of this vulnerability. (Like what happened to Noah).

When you start to admit that some of your solidified traditions are not that important, then you are admitting a sort of arbitrariness (at least to their eyes), and so then it becomes: "if you were wrong before, who says you are not wrong now" etc.

Why Noah was "in his tent".

Supplicant: What does a tent symbolize?
Probably something like a temporary home, but I can't see how it connects to Christ. Maybe something like "the Son of Man has nowhere to lay his head". Some connection between temporary home and rumination/drinking wine?

Matthieu: Jesus was there to renew his tradition, but his competitors (the religious authorities of the time) hated that so they "bled him out" in a single day. (blood is a fluid of renewal/healing)

This was good for foreigners and other nations but bad for the people who rejected him.
Why there will be a "second coming" because part of it was left out in order for the other part to be brought in.

There must still be a proper renewal of the tradition that rejected him. This problem was not solved properly (there has been a gradual renewal until today).

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: The "cycle" is the raw pattern of reality. It's what occurs when there is no higher order to assign common meaning. It is basically synonymous with competition.

Space is built over the cycle, in a sense. It's built by providing a unifying principle to opposing things. Just like God built creation "on top of" the waters.

The waters were the natural state of things, the primitive/raw reality the exists when there is no higher principle to bring things together and stabilize reality (stop the competition / war).

Supplicant: But there are also “waters above”.

Waters above = ideas you don't know/grasp Waters below = facts you don't know/grasp

You can see how these waters are connected. The solutions to the puzzles below (waters below) are found in the unknown ideas above (waters above).
You can join these two by passing through the "tree of life" (through experience and reason) or by rain/rivers/floods (in confusion).

The first is a solid growth (and takes time) the second is a cycle of renewal (which usually doesn't give real growth but is only for healing).

The reason we live in #ClownWorld is that our fearless leaders are clowns. But what is a "Clown"? A clown is someone who is competently incompetent: very skilled at pretending to be incompetent. We are probably ruled by a secret society of clowns. I wish I was joking.

Supplicant: The jester violently rules the unconscious from below wearing many masks. The King returns with conscious revelation, the last laugh.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: Here is the simplest example I can find:

A clown falls on his ass and everyone laughs.

(laughter is a form of rest-renewal).

He is doing both at the same time: Hurting himself to heal others.

(thinking concretely to understand abstract ideas is the best way to ruminate).

Supplicant: Was King David a Clown?

Matthieu: [yes.]

Matthieu: The last story of Jesus is that of him as a Clown. End times, final stories. There is no other solution to the end times other than martyrdom.

Supplicant: I think Jesus is NOT a clown. This is important in recognizing Christ from the Antichrist. I think this is where the difference might be. Not sure yet.

Samson comes before David (the Messiah) and is often used as symbol of antichrist. Makes sense.

The donkey precedes the rider.

Supplicant: [video of Bruce Lee telling us to be like water.]

Matthieu: A lot of what he says is true. The problem is that the truth of "water" or "the cycle" is not supposed to do away completely with the truth of structure, tradition, and forms. He may have fallen for the oldest trick in the book.

A crown without a head will fall into the sea.

But it's hard to differentiate between what he actually said (his whole though) and what people have retained of him and promoted of him.

He may have been a proper renewer and not a destroyer but others used him as a destroyer by showing only parts of him.

I would have to look at everything he wrote and said to see the difference (which I don't have time to do, unfortunately).

Either way, this shows how "sleep" and renewal is a dangerous process because it can even be manipulated into "death" by exterior forces.

Others can take advantage of someone who is renewing himself because it creates a vulnerable position. So very dangerous (think of a caterpillar in a cocoon, or yourself while you sleep).

This may be what happened here. I'm not sure.

Supplicant: How is King David's renewal different/better than vulnerable renewal? He ties all three together no? The covenants and the cycle?

Matthieu: He is the renewer who does not take advantage of the vulnerability of others (not force the renewal).

He does not kill Saul while he is sleeping or while he is pooping etc. (though Saul does try to kill him while he is sleeping).

He seems to wait for Saul to "kill himself".

Supplicant: But he's not waiting for Goliath to kill himself, where is the difference? It's because they asked him to kill Goliath and he did not want to do it out of his own volition?

Matthieu: The sling represents the time cycle.
This is what killed Goliath (the time cycle). So there is no difference in terms of symbolism.

Supplicant: Of the 5 stones he chose, why 5 & what do each represent? Are there 4 cycles which remain after David? Or 4 more cycles that happen through his life? The hitting of the mark on the Giant Tyrant with a vestment of scales is the slaying of a serpent. Are the 4 for the 4 horsemen?

Matthieu: Probably has something to do with the idea of a stone that is outside regular space. 4 usually represents the bounds of space (4 corners, 4 sides). So 5 could either represent something that is above that or below that or both (probably both -> the Ring).

The 5th stone could also represent the center of space, but in this context I think it probably represents the principle of time cycle (not the principle of space).

Could be both at the same time like in the Nebu statue that gets destroyed by a stone that becomes a mountain.

Supplicant: Not to be too much of a literalist, but is it expected that a reader of the narrative would understand David to be aware and intentional in using this "magic"?

Matthieu: Trust God = allow God to use 0miracles.

Not understanding how it works but trusting it will work if it needs to happen. Being aware of this is not the same as controlling things.

Of course, this is not always the case. Sometimes we control things and that's good (work).

Supplicant: Thanks, not sure I understand it all, but it's not a "formula" of symbols that induce God's miracles, it's trust. But in retrospect, we can glean symbolic significance from the story particulars?

Matthieu: It can also be a formula of symbols that leads to a miracle. I think the restrictions to this in the Bible was targeted at laymen. Only priests were allowed to do it because it was considered dangerous for the average person. Same with divination. The priests did divination.
They used the Hoshen for divination (Hoshen -> Nahash = snake). The 12 stones of the breastplate were def related to divination.
Later, prophets became necessary again because the religious hierarchies had fallen. What do you do when the official hierarchies falter and begin to serve the "strange powers" and become prostitutes for the power of a foreign empire (and its religions)?
When the religious hierarchy itself begins to fall, you are in deep trouble. Then you need a "stranger" (Elijah) that is not part of it in order to work with powers of renewal (miracles and live prophecies).

When all falls apart, prophets appear and are hated by the fallen authorities but loved by faithful authorities because it allows them to stay in position without having to call out the corrupted portions (it's a paradox that's hard to get out of – [this is] fully described in the Bible).

Supplicant: So even the authorities that remain faithful are still compromised. I think I can understand that. It's easy to suffer a lack of courage and creativity when the whole system is against you.

Matthieu: It's extremely complicated because if you take a vow you are FORCED to follow your vow. (no excuses).

So you are in a dilemma...

(read book of Judges for examples of this dilemma)

You need an exterior influence to help you out of this dilemma. These are important subjects.

Supplicant: David kills Goliath with a stone taken from a brook (water) and receives the daughter of Saul, whose name is Michal (brook). He holds a sling in one hand and a staff in the other. He also steals a jug of water and a spear while Saul sleeps.

Matthieu: These stories are amazing aren't they.

Once you start seeing what it means it's mind-blowingly interesting. Like some sort of huge puzzle that needs to be solved and somehow, the fate the universe might very well depend on it.

Clowns are extremely powerful. Clown ~ Crown (I'm not just playing with the sound of words here, these symbolic concepts are very much related) Example: Samson was a type of "clown" and his long hair was the secret power from his "crown". Among others aspects, there are warrior clowns and healer clowns (these are not exclusive, and usually go together).

The warrior clown destroys and the healer clown renews. They are actually the same but it's not always easy to see.
One of the secrets of the clown is to hurt himself or others (which includes looking stupid or ridiculous or lose everything) in order to heal himself or others (renewal).

Like everything else, not all clowns are beneficial for all of us (as seen in Samson story)

If I recall correctly, there is a very interesting description of an example of a "secret clown society" in the writings of Black Elk.

>Give me one example of a warrior-clown who hurts himself to heal others (i bet you can't).

OK: Hulk Hogan, Ted DeBiase, Macho-Man (to name a few)

Never underestimate the importance of the WWF. Along with the Carnival and Circus, it's a powerful symbol of the end-times.

Supplicant: "God kills & God keeps alive"

Supplicant: What would the jug and spear stealing symbolize?

Matthieu: He could have killed him with his own weapon. This represents the destructive power of the cycle (ironic death).
David knows not to do this because it would turn against him (don't kill messiah when it's you).
The jug of water is power of renewal he takes from him to show him.

Supplicant: Are heavyweight boxers also warrior clowns with maybe a different ratio of warrior to clown? They help sell the fight so there is definitely some kayfabe involved. Do they renew through entertainment and embodying a competitive ideal?

Matthieu: Sports are def related to the same pattern.

Competition is related to the cyclical pattern. I would say the important difference lies in the idea of "hurting yourself". The goal of the boxer is to hurt his opponent, but on the whole it's a similar pattern (like you said). The competition is for the purpose of distraction and entertainment so, in that sense, it fits the bill.

The more the event is "fixed", the more it follows the clown pattern because the competition has a common principle (identity) so any damage by either side is self inflicted. The reason why Samson is a clown is that he joins with his enemy (loves his enemy) and so any damage he does to his enemy become self inflicted. Every attack ends up being an attack on himself.

Supplicant: Have you come across the "Nephilim looked like clowns" rabbit hole yet?

Matthieu: Not really, but I already think this is the case, which is why I said Samson was a "fallen giant" in my book.

Samson is very similar to a Nephilim and he is a clown. The reason why people "see clowns" when they take DMT is that these substances cause strong "intoxication" which means they encounter ideas that are too high for their usual consciousness to understand (to handle properly).

ideas too high + energies too low causes clowns. Similarly, ideas too high + energies too low causes GIANTS.

The image of a clown on stilts is a perhaps a combination of these symbols (clowns and giants). In general the idea of a giant is that there is something too low (too big, too grotesque) being integrated by an extremely high level idea without passing through the domain of the reasonable.

The idea tried to bypass the middle levels in order to join with lower levels. This is "the sons of God joining with the daughters of Adam" but bypassing Adam himself.

This is what I call the "Ring" in previous posts.

The "Ring" is the circus, rink, hall of mirror, and many others. Juggling is a symbol of the "Ring" (trying to grasp too much -> Juggling).

The Ring is also "revolution" but this is harder to understand since most people still have not figured out that revolutions almost always come from international elite groups trying to make the masses serve their will (rather than the will of their king/government).

Supplicant: Matthieu what seems to be the origin, that humor almost has no place in some churches? There are fools for Christ, but mostly in eastern old traditions. The west almost got rid of this. Laughing seems to be dangerous in these place, making it suspicious to outsiders.

Matthieu: No idea.

Jesus is definitely NOT a clown. It might actually be that the antichrist is a clownish version of Jesus. Similar to Samson and perhaps David too. I've always said (and others have too) that antichrist will resemble Dan->Samson. I also think he will resemble David.

Supplicant: Savior portrayed as a clown (king of Jews) - Christ.
Clown portrayed as a savior - Antichrist

Christ turns death into renewal. Antichrist turns renewal into death. So don't be fooled.

Supplicant: Christ as Clown: ultimate self-harm for ultimate renewal

Secret Rules as Clowns: ultimate carnival agenda for ultimate harm to the world.

Matthieu: I don't think Jesus is a clown. I think this is what differentiates him from the counterfeits who do controlled opposition.

God created free will but Satan can't comprehend that. When Satan plays God (imitates God at lower level) he reproduces himself by controlled opposition. This is actually a very deep subject. The concept of controlled opposition is very important but nobody seems to get it (not sure why).

Satan can't handle free will. He likes the idea that God is responsible of all the levels of causality in his creation. This is a huge subject.

Supplicant: I don't want to be lazy in my own search by asking but I've always wondered - is there only one antichrist? Revelation points to one 'man'. But feels like 'his' spirit has navigated throughout time in many bodies. I think the antichrist and the beasts have been here for some time

Matthieu: IMO it's an operating system (so to speak). But this means it is playing itself out (for a long time) and when it fully takes power it will embody itself completely into an individual to symbolize the operating system (the head of the system)

Me thinks we'll find out soon enough.

Supplicant: "We'll find out soon enough". Please elaborate, if you will. Do you believe current events are indicative of something?

All roads lead to digital ID, tracking, and AI "fact checking" for everything (total population control).

It hurts to see most people still wanting to pretend there is no plan when it is PAINFULLY OBVIOUS.

If the AI fact-checking passes, it gives complete control of reality to whoever controls it

It allows the denial of anything deemed false (= not supporting their narrative)

But, more importantly, it allows for false-flags, hoaxes, and plain old lies to be enforced as true.

It even allows for the creation of a completely enforced false reality.

And just by coincidence, they also seem really taken by the idea of creating all sorts of virtual realities.

Supplicant: What is the symbolism of the divination cup hidden in Benjamin's bag? Why the cup?

Matthieu: The Cup should usually be interpreted as a cup of wine. It's filled with "toxins" which means something you can't handle completely (hence why it intoxicates). So to "hold the cup" or to be the "master of the cup" means the same as being the master of this influence (the influence of intoxication).

This means (basically) being master of what you can't control. This is the same as saying that Joseph is a "master of dreams" (for example). Joseph is a master of dreams: dreams happen when you sleep = your mind loses control of your body.

Dreaming is about losing control.

Similarly, going into exile is about losing control.
--> Joseph is also the master of exile. He is able to survive and thrive in exile. Saying Joseph is master of dreams and saying he is master of exile actually means the same thing at different scales (if that makes sense to you).

It's important to understand this.
Now, this is related to Divination.

Divination is interpreting what is NOT under control/reason. This is why those who practice it use randomness as subtle medium. The medium of divination must be NOT be under control. You pick a card, roll a dice, or choose blindly from a bag.

Those who divine can interpret this "randomness" or "loss of control". They are able to see the higher meaning within the (seemingly) random occurrences.

This is also what it means to be master of dreams and master of exile. Now we can add "master of divination" to that list.

Now, that being said, it should be possible to interpret what Joseph did what he did. Why he used that cup in this manner. I can't get into here (too complicated) but I think this is a pretty good start.

Supplicant: Cup in the bag - Joseph

Drunk in the tent - Noah

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: The TKGB is definitely related to divination.

Divination in Hebrew is basically "snake". Divination means you are accessing information you are not supposed to access NOW (but maybe later or maybe even earlier but not now, just like TKGB).
There's a difference between learning something new and acting on it.

Just seeing the future is like studying the TKGB (which is allowed in theory). Acting on this foresight is like eating from TKGB (forbidden to Adam).

Joseph saw the dream but then his brothers acted on it. Joseph probably should have told only his father about the dream because Jacob knew how to wait and ruminate (this is also what his leg injury means - he was slowed down by his encounter with the angel/principle of Edom, which was too powerful for him - he just resisted instead).
According to Eve, God also said to not even touch it (which is not the same as seeing it + studying it either).

Importantly, "touching" also means striking (you shall not strike it down).

The word for "touch" is definitely related to the idea of spreading diseases in Hebrew.

To be "stricken by disease" is a common idiom. (lit. touched by disease).

Supplicant: Randomness might be purely a function of scale you are analyzing.

Matthieu: That's why the TKGB can change into a Tree of Life.

Like in the story of Joseph. The whole thing looked random (or rather based on arbitrary actions and passions of the brothers) but eventually it's revealed that God was (perhaps secretly) behind it all.

Similar to Esther.

Esther might even be a clearer example of this idea because it involves Purim (Lots). So quite literally the randomness turns out to have a purpose.

Book of Jonas also involves this. He is also picked by lots to be tossed out the boat (but clearly it was God's doing).

Matthieu: It's just the decomposition (death) of everything (fall->winter) to be resurrected later in the year (->spring).

Monsters and hybrids are what happen when things decompose and return to a primitive/fluid state.
All monsters represent a problem in the union of heaven and earth.
Ghosts = soul without a body
Zombie = body without a soul
Giants = incomplete or temporary joining of spirit and matter (this one harder to understand). A body too low for a spirit too high.
Any sort of "undead" represents some sort of problem in connection of spirit and body.
Even modern Halloween costumes represent the same thing.
Example: the "sexy cop" (any sexy official) represents the same idea. A cop is appointed in this role from above. So embodying a sexy cop is an example of body too low (too sexy) for a spirit too high (the office of cop).

Supplicant: When do corporations become giants in the sense you make here?

The vision/mission is the spirit and the people and technologies are the matter.

I want to incorporate and build an app. This is why I ask.

Matthieu: Then the body of the corporation is unable or unwilling to express the true spirit of the corporation. (so very often nowadays).

Supplicant: What makes a body too high or too low? I could think of ways to view a giant as "too high", but you identify it as too low. I think I understand what qualities make up "ideas that are too high". But is it just juxtaposition to a too high idea that makes a body too low?

Matthieu: Yes. Relative terms (all terms should always be comparisons, in my opinion, but that's me).

Example: You can't teach a monkey to play poker.

He might take the cards in his hands, he might even be able to hold them up and put them on the table at the right time. But he ain't playing poker.

Imagine being a cynical materialist trying to manipulate the followers of a religious tradition by orchestrating worldly events to artificially fulfill ancient prophecies. What's hilarious about this scenario is that, contrary to popular opinion, God loves irony. Irony is not a disqualifier for the fulfilment of prophecy or divination. Most spiritual predictions operate within the realm of cyclical causality.

Anyone thinking they are fooling others by cynically fulfilling prophecy would be fooling themselves into fulfilling it. The house always wins and God always gets the last laugh (whether you believe in it or not).

Supplicant: Can anyone explain why in the Orthodox Study Bible,

Wisdom is referred to both Christ and in the Greek feminine form?

This makes no sense

My interpretation: Christ owns the feminine wisdom and so He is the ultimate Wisdom
If anyone can answer, it's Matthieu Pageau.

Matthieu: I've mentioned this anomaly before on twitter (don't remember where). There seems to be 2 versions of wisdom. One is a sort of foundational principle and the other is a sort of mirror used to renew and question the current order.

It's possible that it's 2 views of the concept.
It's possible that the first (the masculine principle) is from our human perspective and the other (the feminine principle) is from God's perspective.

If that is the case, it makes for some divergent imagery on the whole: Foundation-stone V Water-mirror.

Supplicant: Would this somehow tie-in with Moses hitting the stone with his staff?

Matthieu: The stone is def the principle of renewal, and Moses should not have forced it (because when you force renewal you don't really benefit from it - you are trying to control it, which is not rest-renewal).

Supplicant: 2 Qs.
1. What makes the stone a principle of renewal? I thought it would be something like tradition, culture, center, things 'set in stone'.
Or is it by the context of the story?

2. Why would hitting it with a staff be controlling it?

Matthieu: 1. There are 3 stones.

a) The stumbling stone (the irregular stone)
b) The foundation stone (the regular stone)
c) The Keystone or pinnacle stone (above duality 1-2)

The stone in question here is (a) , which is why Moses was supposed to ask it for water (=renewal, change).

2. I think it's pretty obvious why hitting something is controlling it. He was supposed to ask the stone (talk to the stone) for water, which implies the stone has the choice -> it accepts to give water.
Hitting the stone forcing (like hitting or whipping a slave is forcing).

You usually have to try to ignore it.
(like they did when they decided to go around mount Seir)

But if you are thirsty (for renewal) then maybe God tells you to ask the stone for water. If you hit the stone you still get water but you won't be allowed to enter the promised land.

About exile and the symbolism of the "Black Box" Exile is always centered around a riddle can't be solved. It's the "black box" (the central taboo) that everyone tiptoes around without ever being able to deal with it or even mention it. The "elephant in the room" as we often say. The cause of exile is a central stumbling stone. This stone (a riddle that can't be answered) becomes a central taboo and eventually gets contained in a "black box".

It's a way to negatively define the boundaries of space when you are in power over others. In order to subjugate others, you can take their identity (or something that symbolizes the independence of their identity) and you make it taboo. Then you put it into a "black box" which nobody is supposed to even talk about or think about positively. Exile can be maintained in this manner (exile in sense of foreign service) by simply keeping the identity in a box. It becomes an official stumbling stone which is used to indirectly maintain dominion over another's space.

When the "black box" is opened, all hell breaks loose.

In order to make a slave out of another, you can keep them turning around the taboo of their independent identity (there can be more than one symbol in the box of course). Of course, you can also turn around it in triumph if you want because it is not your identity in the box. But for those whose identity is the black box, you have subjugated them and put them in exile. They will now be bound to vainly turn in circles (amounting to nothing) as long as it remains in the box. *These are not suggestions on how to subjugate others but rather just description of how it is usually done.

> Supplicant: is there anything in particular in your opinion which is our taboo now?
> Matthieu: That's easy. There are many examples. But simply "being white" is an obvious example. Nobody is allowed to talk positively about that. if you use it positively, it does not exist, but if you use it negatively, then it is at the center of all the world's problems complaints. Different groups compete for territory and resources, and general control. Europeans had become very good at winning this competition. Now other groups also want power and control so they band together against Europeans. Pretty simple, really.

Supplicant: Can applying a measurement to a thing be akin to applying a meaning to that thing?
I'm trying to understand trad. geometry (as opposed to new age "sacred geometry").
Geometry means to measure the earth.
So I'm curious if it could be said geometry applies meaning to matter.
Matthieu: Yes. It's the same as naming the indefinite with an idea. If I say that a length measures 10, what I mean is that it can be described in terms of a standard length (unit length) as 10 extensions of it.

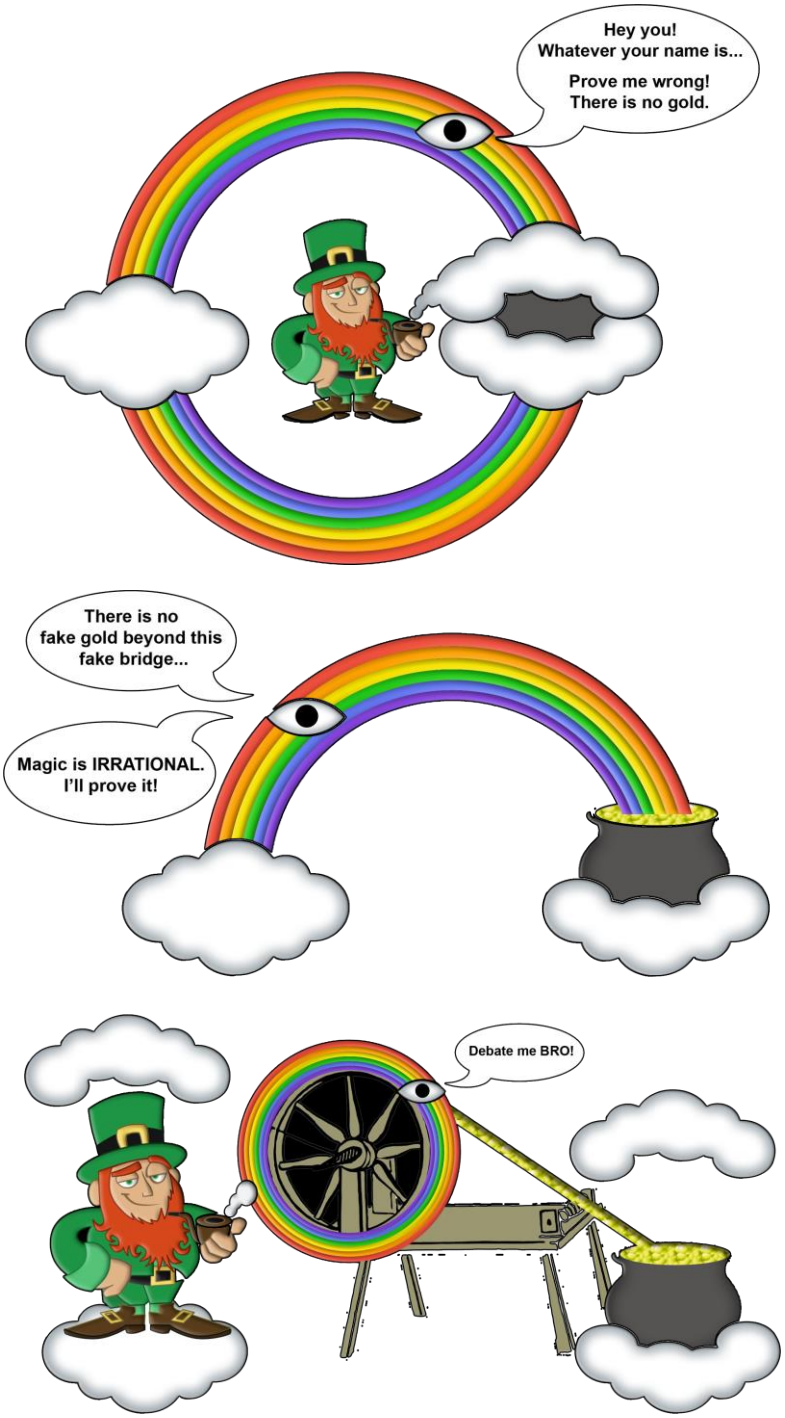
Magic is always Meta. That's why it's impossible to seize and put into a cage (and that's probably a good thing too). One can still be against it though.



Hey you!
Whatever your name is...
Prove me wrong!
There is no gold.
There is no fake gold beyond this fake bridge...
Magic is IRRATIONAL. I'll prove it!
Debate me BRO!

Supplicant: What's the leprechaun's pipe for?

Smoking is bad for you!

Matthieu: The pipe creates smoke that ascends into meta.

The tobacco represents the current level (earth - factual reality). The pipe is a technology that changes tobacco into smoke (the smoke also creates a moment of confusion for the trick to work - loss of awareness for the transition)

Supplicant: Could you give a definition of what "meta" is? What does it mean for smoke to "ascend into it"?

Supplicant: Factual reality cherry picked and used to create maximal confusion. Did you consider this or that? You can never consider enough.

Supplicant: His smoke obscures the true gold at the end of the rainbow. He subverts the rainbow to make his own gold.

Supplicant: Is this related to pro wrestling?

Matthieu: All roads eventually lead to the WWF.
So... yes.

Supplicant: Why is that? Is it just that it's kind of the lowest level instantiation of a principle of suspended disbelief? We all know it's fake but play along for the entertainment? It IS a great example with fairly transparent methods of fakery.

Matthieu: Because the WWF is one of the patterns that happen when an authority wants opposite forces to "coexist" or "cooperate" but does not have the higher principle to truly bring them together into a reasonable and revealed principle that includes them both.

This is important.

Almost everything today operates as WWF.

Multiculturalism is a clear example.

"Let's bring in all these opposing cultures... it does not matter if we don't have a higher identity or goal to truly bring them all together".

The goal is actually "fake conflict" on the ring. It was intended to generate "fake conflict" in order to bring about a higher order that will "manage" the conflict.

Fake arbiter, fake wrestlers. These all pretend to be real when they are fake. Only the manager sometimes pretends to be fake when in fact he is real (Vince.)

These are all just analogies of course, but they represent well what is happening now, in my opinion.

Supplicant: Two questions, if you don't mind. 1: What is a scandal stone? 2: Are the squiggly-lines the waters above and the waters below from day 2 of Genesis?

Supplicant: Can't speak for Matthieu, obviously, but my interpretation is the squiggly lines are curtains: the secret government operates behind the curtain, and the scandal stone is something done that is hidden out of shame. Your mileage may vary Supplicant: The waters above/below as curtains is an interesting one. The fake govt and the sc. stone hiding behind undefined potential.

The waters above/below can also flip, they are just water.
It got me thinking what it would look like if the govt and the stone switched positions. Would that 'switch' scenario be a fake opposition party coming to the 'rescue' from the scandalous ruling party/establishment?

Supplicant: this is definitely getting above my pay grade.
Let me sum up my answer to the question I hear you asking with a couple of images. Think the ying/yang symbol, or maybe better, the hourglass. The hourglass ends are defined, but at the appointed time they flip, to repeat the cycle.

Supplicant: re: scandal stone?
Perhaps an "objectified instance" of it, which can be either persecuted or dismissed, but never really interferes with the ongoing flow of power. That makes sense. I guess it's something like the twisted version of a stumbling stone (which Eve is referred to as in Genesis).
Evil Adam -> Fake authority
Evil Eve -> Fake stumbling stone
Both inside the ring (colosseum, stage) of the snake eating its own tail. I'm trying to read what else is there.
I guess the 2 waters are connected to the flood, or a potential flood. No clue, otherwise.
Bribery and Blackmail are like Fake Sacrifice and Fake Revelation (revelation that brings dark, instead of light). I'm not a symbolism person, but it would seem that water strongly relates to what is hidden or unknowable. It's a layer separating our known, lived space to an area which is obfuscated, not accessible and perceptually distorted.

Story:

The Transparent Pearl

A young boy was swimming in the ocean when a great wave and current pulled him into the deep. The boy was panicked at first, but then his attention was taken by a shiny object in the sand. He was able to grab it just before the current returned him to the shore. Happy to be alive, the boy looked at what he had found at the bottom of the ocean. It was a beautiful transparent pearl, the likes of which he had never seen.

He brought the pearl to his home town but nobody even looked at it because they had no idea what it was. Then, he brought the pearl to big city where an old man did recognize the value of the pearl. However, the old man refused to purchase the pearl because the man did not believe he had found it in the ocean. So, the boy tried to find a buyer from the pearl syndicate, but everyone thought the pearl had been stolen (although nobody knew from where).

"Do you have your certificate of authenticity", they asked him... There was no way such a small boy could have found such a beautiful pearl from the depths of the ocean. Nobody recognized the value of the pearl and no-one from the pearl syndicate was willing to buy it. They could not stamp the certificate of authenticity with their authenticity stamp.

The young boy found a homeless man, down on his luck, and so decided to give him the transparent pearl instead. Maybe the homeless man will find a buyer on one of his journeys and then return as a wealthy king.

The Stranger, the Dog, and the Donkey (A completely fictional and redonkulous story).

The Stranger, the Dog, and the Donkey

A dog was roving near the ruins, tracking the scent of rotten meat. The Stranger was standing at the wall, and the dog began to bark.

Dog: I am searching for Elijah the Prophet.
Stranger: If I am allowed to appoint myself, then surely it is me.

Dog: Elijah! The city is upside-down! When will the King return?
Elijah: ...When pigs fly.

Elijah's answer fell just short, and the dog began to cry.
The wayward donkey saw the dog and so began to bray.

Donkey: Are you still waiting for the King?
Dog: Alas... He will never return! Even the Prophet has jested... when pigs fly.

The donkey knew not what this meant, and so began to laugh.
He went to meet the funny man, to hear the final line.

Donkey: Stranger, stranger tell me please... when oh when will pigs be flying?
Elijah: ...When they learn to ruminate.

The Donkey laughed hard at the joke and went to tell the dog.
Surely this would cheer him up and make him laugh out loud.

Donkey: Good news! Just teach a pig to ruminate and the King will soon return.

Crushing grapes with heal is similar to crushing snake. About taming the intoxication = What making good wine is (taming the toxins).

Supplicant: Bit off topic, but can one then also interpret Jesus turning water into wine as the ability of the Word to intoxicate or slay?
Matthieu: Turning water into wine seems to be about accelerating time. It takes time to make wine, so turning water straight into wine seems to imply an acceleration of this process. In the story is may even imply accelerating the time of death for Jesus. Not 100% sure though.

Supplicant: With that said, why does the bible warn against the use of divination?

Matthieu: Because it's dangerous. It can cause self referential loop causality. It can bring you into exile and get you stuck in a self referential loop.

This has actually happened to me (and others too, of course).

Exactly what happens in the story of Joseph (his divinatory dreams).

Joseph told his divinatory dream to his family and this started a chain a self referential causality which brough them all into exile (they later became slaves = serving time in exile = serving strangers in exile).

Supplicant: [missing text]

Supplicant: How is this different from a prophet.
Matthieu: Prophets are usually ones who directly receive God's voice from above = looking up at the light directly.

Divination is like looking down into the waters of a lake and seeing the reflection of the light. = seeing a light above yourself by looking down into the waters. They are both susceptible to getting stuck in a self referential loop (example: Jonah) but the second (divination) is a lot harder because you would have to find your way out yourself (which you can't do, so you just have to wait for another to take you out). In the story of Jonah he does end up getting caught up at the level of divination because he did not follow the direct voice of God

He fell to lower levels and his causality was determined by "lots" (same level as divination). So he was "tossed in the waters" until God saved him.

Supplicant: How does someone else take them out of the loop? By renaming them?

Matthieu: If you get a new name, it means you get a higher identity able to make logical sense of what was previously seen as chaos (because you did not have a high enough perspective before).

Sometime you can get out with the same identity (if another of a higher identity helps you out).

Why Abraham was able to get out of the "deep sleep" and how his offspring was eventually able to get out of exile.

He sent his "seed" (identity) into a strange woman (Egyptian) and this caused (eventually) exile, but then he got a higher identity from God, which took them out.

Supplicant: If someone were to take a Nazarite vow, or something similar, would it give a new identity?

Matthieu: The Nazirite vow is def about trying to get out of self-referential cycle. The hair growing symbolizes the passage of time (which is the only way to get out of a cycle on your own). Long hair proves how long you have been waiting (it symbolizes the time itself or powers of time). You are not allowed to drink wine because wine is what can bring you into a cycle (intoxication). Related to contact with death as well (in general).

You don't necessarily need to get a new name (but possibly could).

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: There are many, many ways to express the condition called "exile". I could write a huge book about it if I thought it would be useful. Not much to do with how psychologists usually interpret dreams.
I can give one example. But it usually takes many examples to see the pattern. Dream Example:

... I am going to get food from my freezer... but when I open it, something's wrong!

The freezer has defrosted and now it is flooded with dirty water from all the defrosted stakes and frozen fish etc. It's gross!

I will have to clean this fridge ...

I wake up.

Matthieu: I think you're joking, but it IS about "seed retention".

Joseph puts the cup in the "grain" (which is actually seed) in order to trick them into being detained (retaining seed) in Egypt.

Ultimately it will be about "seed retention" because Joseph will retain grain for 7 years.

Joseph is identified as one who "guards the covenant" which refers to the circumcised member. His job is related to "preserving seed" in many ways. Why he resisted the advances of the foreign woman (Potiphar's wife).

Supplicant: How does one get out of exile? And how does one know they're no longer in exile?

Matthieu: Exile usually happens when you try to look at yourself from a foreign perspective that you cannot handle. So in order to get out of exile you have to find a new identity that is able to reconcile these conflicting identities. A higher identity that solves the problems of both.
This is how I ended up in exile (going on 24 years now). I tried to look at myself through a foreign perspective and have not yet recovered from it. But all my understanding of symbolism comes from this exile so I can't complain too much about the curse.
I don't want to drag other people into exile with me so I abstain from talking about the problems I have not been able to solve for myself yet.

There is nothing special about my condition. Many people are now in exile, but I guess I am a little different in that I am aware of it.

Supplicant: Thank you sir. I've been trying to trace the beginning of my exile and I think I now have a clearer perspective of this journey I've been 'forced' into. Or perhaps forced myself into. Thank you.

Matthieu: How to get out of exile:

1) get a higher identity to solve some problems

2) get circumcised to remove some problems

It's not either or here. It is usually both. This is how Abraham was able to get out of the "deep sleep" he fell into.

You don't have to solve all the derived problems of the foreign perspective, just the central ones.

You don't have to eat the whole pig, just the eyes and maybe the head. What I mean is that you don't have to solve for the entire body of the perspective you want to integrate.

A higher identity that integrates the foreign head (getting a new name = new identity) and the circumcision of the flesh that was part of the old identity proper but cannot fit with your identity. You don't need to integrate the entire foreign body is what I am saying.

> Supplicant: What do you do with the 'tail'? What do you do with the part of the foreign identity that tries to trick you?

> Supplicant: I guess part of it is pointing the trickery out and putting it on display so that people can remember. It might be bronze because the snake is put in its proper place in the hierarchy, somewhere around the middle. But that's only true if bronze is the equivalent of brass.
> Matthieu: There's wordplay in the original Hebrew text. Snake is "Nahash" and Bronze is "Nehash" (the same word). Why are these words related in their roots? I would not be able to say precisely, but just the wordplay is probably enough to explain the association in the text.
> And (like you said) if one makes an analogy between the subtlety of the 4 metals and that of the 4 elements, you would get something like:
> 1) Fire - Gold
> 2) Air - Silver
> 3) Water - Bronze
> 4) Earth - Iron
> Interestingly, the snakes that bit them people were "burning snake" or "fiery snakes" or "poisonous snakes" so it makes some sense to think the snake that healed might have been "cooling snake" or "watery snake" of "medicinal snake".
> So it's not completely out of left field
> ⁂ ⁂ ⁂
>
> Matthieu: Not if the tradition does not have the answer to the problem that brought you into exile in the first place, and not when the problem is important enough that it cannot be ignored once you have considered it.
> It's not all bad. Exile forces you to find solutions to problems before they hit to everyone else. It's like seeing into the future in a sense. You see the problem that will eventually become everyone's problem so you have an opportunity to solve it beforehand.
> Once everyone else starts to be hit by this problem, then you might be able to help others so they don't get stuck in that cycle of confusion and death.

This is what it means that Joseph "saved grain" while in personal exile so that when the famine hit everyone else, he was able to solve that problem with the solutions he found from the dreams.

Supplicant: In what way is dreams being about exile/renewal helpful? It seems that the hard part is that symbols/events in dreams need to be associated with things in waking life to give insight. Sorry if this is a dumb/rude question I just want to understand.
Matthieu: Sometimes your waking life is exile.

Supplicant: So through understanding dreams as a form of exile and ruminating on them in conjunction with circumstances of exile in waking life, insight into the way out of exile can possibly occur?

Matthieu: This is what Joseph's story is really all about.

Not just how to get out of exile but how to simply survive it (which is part of getting out of it).

Supplicant: You've said dreaming, sleeping, going into exile are very similar. But why does Joseph start off as a master of dreams but not a master of exile? From the start, he can interpret dreams/divinize. But then he's lost in the wilderness and needs help finding his brothers (Gen 37:16).

Matthieu: He is not a master of dreams at the start. He has a divinatory dream (which anyone can have). That dream causes exile because he was not a master of it (could not understand it). Only later did he become a master of dreams. His brothers were cynical when they called him that.

Saying he is a master of dream also means "you are our master... Only in your dreams".

Because the dreams of Joseph were showing him as their master. They bowed before him.

It's actually similar to the cynical "king of Jews" above the cross.

So Joseph is the master but "only in his dreams"

When he goes into exile it is like falling asleep. Then the simulation starts (life as a fake Egyptian) and the holding patterns (prison).

This is like a dream (his exile) and so in that world he becomes a master...

Date: Mar 5, 2024

Supplicant: Are there dream narratives about things other than sleeping?

Matthieu: Sure. Some dreams are prophetic etc. But in my experience most dreams are about sleeping and exile. But it's not always that easy to see at first (like most true symbolism - it's in your face but can't see it).

Example: Pharaoh's dream. Was that about sleeping?

Yes, but not at first glance
The dream is about 7 years of famine that "take over" 7 years of plenty.

How is that about sleeping?

Well, the 7 years of "famine" are also 7 years in which the land will be resting/sleeping.

So it could be interpreted as a dream that warns (or describes) that soon the land will be "Falling asleep" and become unproductive (agricultural productivity is work).

The dream could easily be interpreted as mini version of this. In that case, the "land" is a dream narrative representation of the body of Pharaoh that is about to become limp (non-productive) for a while as he falls asleep (sleep = the famine, the fallow land).

Pharaoh's dream is a narrative of falling asleep

Seven productive cows (a representation of his body when it is awake and full of energy) will be replaced/eaten by seven thin cows (a representation of his body when it is low in energy)

Translation: my body is now falling asleep.

Supplicant: Are the dreams solutions for getting out of exile when you wake?

Matthieu: Not only.

In this dream, one of the "solutions" was escape + hide a dead skeleton (even though his friend wanted him to exhume it) so it could renew itself naturally.

If he would have buried it as was demanded of him, perhaps he would never have resurrected (gotten out of exile).

Supplicant: This is very interesting. Thank you for this. Perhaps one day I will understand the symbolism of my recurring dreams of broken dirty toilets, twigs growing out of my face... and of course... teeth falling out.

Matthieu: Broken toilet = not finding proper way to renew yourself (excretion is part of the renewal = losing old useless body).

Twigs growing from face = returning to nature (rewilding) = head becomes nature (same pattern as dog-head here).

Teeth falling = not able to eat (get a new body).

Supplicant: I see. I had similar intuition except for the teeth falling. I understood it as loosing the old body. But now that I think of it, in the dream I'm always loosing good, healthy teeth.. So it can't be old body. But then again we're not really talking about "old" as in "age", right?

Matthieu: Having weird things happening to teeth, like being brittle or rotten etc. is a very common dream pattern.

It seems to represent losing your ability to impose meaning on material reality. Teeth are how we integrate food, so losing them is losing that power (losing power over body).

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: I think it's something like that.

In dreams there is always obstacles. It's something about the mind not understanding that it does not need to do anything at all. Doing "nothing" is what your body needs here (rest). The mind has trouble accepting this.
Sleeping is truly the opposite of working. The mind likes to work. It does not like to rest. It's like the mind wants to keep control of the rest, and it's not exactly what it should be doing. I'm not sure I am explaining this clearly.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: I'd have to know what the dream was.

Even prophetic dreams can be about sleeping (in fact most are, in my opinion).

Joseph's dreams. Check
Pharaoh's dream. Check
Nebuchadnezzar's dreams. Check.

Because of symbolism, dreams can be interpretated at different scales.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: It's rarely obvious

In a dream narrative you can identify with different parts of the process.

e.g. You can identity as one who "loses body" (dropping your food on the floor) or as the body that is being lost (being chased away by a cop for example.) There are many perspectives.

So it's hard to see all these perspectives (takes time and many examples).

In the case of Joseph.

Joseph identifies with the "new mind" and "new body". He sees himself as this part in the narrative. This is actually not such a common perspective in my experience.

Joseph sees himself as new body:

The sheeves of wheat bow down before his.
Wheat = food -> food = body. He is new body that will take precedence.

The other dream is about "new mind": The 11 stars, sun and moon all bow before his star. This is "new mind" (star is a light = idea).

So the dream is about Joseph seeing himself becoming the new body (Sheaf of wheat) and the new mind (leading star).

It's just a certain (rare) perspective on the dream narrative.

(this is pretty advanced symbolic interpretation by the way).

Wheat is food, food is "new body". It's quite literally what it is. Not a metaphor.

Supplicant: What about nightmares?

Matthieu: Usually the same pattern, but more intense. Any of the patterns I describe can become terrifying
Like a horror movie, a lot of what makes something terrifying is more subtle than most people realize. Watching a horror movie without the music turns it into a comedy sometimes.

Supplicant: Jesus said to him [the sick man], "Rise, take up your bed and walk". And immediately the man was made well, took up his bed, and walk.

John 5:8

Matthieu: Some of Jesu's miracles were about "changing death into sleep" and then having the person get up.

Supplicant: Sleeping is about your mind losing control of your body and then losing itself (losing consciousness), and then doing "nothing" (resting). This is where everything gets re-energized. Then your new mind (re-energized) takes hold of your new body (re-energized) and you wake up.

Matthieu: Sleeping is about your mind losing control of your body and then losing itself (losing consciousness), and then doing "nothing" (resting). This is where everything gets re-energized. Then your new mind (re-energized) takes hold of your new body (re-energized) and you wake up.

So I'm saying self referential dreams are just a narrative that tells this story (tweeted above). There are many ways to symbolize the different parts of this story so many ways to tell it.

Supplicant: [...] In your estimation, do dreams often or rarely offer specifics or solutions or problems to one's life or circumstances or are they "just" a representation of this pattern that happens every night. Why differ?

Matthieu: Sometimes they offer insights
Sometimes they predict the future.
Sometimes they warn you of an illness your body knows about but not your mind.
Sometimes they show you new brilliant ideas you had in the back of your mind but never paid attention to.

Many reasons to consider dreams.

Supplicant: I was thinking about this over the past 2 days and realized that while Eve's sin is certainly from an ontological reaching "up" toward Heaven, it also has everything to do with taking the seed from the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil (TKGB as you say). Would you have any thoughts on this?

Matthieu: I think the TKGB is a fruit that does not have it's seed in it. Or better yet, a fruit in which Adam and Eve couldn't find the seed (yet or at all).

So eating from the fruit probably means you make this part of your body, but you don't know the "seed" at the source of the fruit.

So Adam and Eve can't handle their new bodies (because it now contains some of the fruits of TKGB) so they fall because their body no longer supports them, it now supports another identity.

Supplicant: So then we could understand it as something like: eating the fruit from TKGB is a "becoming" of it (new identity), and then they themselves bear the "seeds" of the TKGB.

Something like "becoming" the center. But in so doing, fall and become exiled (outset)?

Matthieu: It's about trying to be something that is too much for you.

The ruse is when someone convinces you that you can "become" that which is too big for you right NOW.

Indeed if someone convinces you that "being" is the same as "becoming" then you might end up in exile.

I think the "Rainbow" is trying to convince us that "going somewhere" is the same as "being somewhere" (or something like that). Or that making a "promise" is just as good as fulfilling it. Or "Hope" in a reward is just as good as a reward. etc.

Seems about right.

I just realized that "law of attraction" or "the secret" type philosophies are exactly about that as what I just said about the rainbow:

Wishing for something is metaphysically the same (in their worldview) as having it fulfilled.
The identity their fallen body now supports is the "Seed" of TKGB, that they do not know. They are now slaves to a principle they do not truly know.

So they now "serve a strange god in exile". They are slaves that must follow instructions from a god they don't understand.

Supplicant: Being Asleep = Israel in Egypt
Losing Body = Killing the Egyptian

Matthieu: Losing body = your children are thrown in the river in a strange land.

Later. a less extreme "losing body" is Moses set afloat in the basket on river. (temporarily lose child)

Then, another "losing body" when Moses kills the Egyptian. This one is part of the renewal too.

The last one ("killing the Egyptian") is like cleaning yourself (defending/separating yourself from the foreign when it starts to attack you). It's like circumcision too.

There are many aspects to "losing body". It helps to understand and identify them.

Supplicant: I heard your brother mentioning how in early days you would "train" yourself by looking @ songs by RedHotChilliPeppers etc. Could you provide some examples that you saw profound meaning in their lyrics etc.? Could be good training wheels for us here

Matthieu: Where on earth did you hear that. LOL.
It's not false though.

You want a good "Training"?

Keep a notebook, and every day do a series of pushups.

Start with 1, then the next say 2, then 3. Add one pushup every day. (if you are out of shape you can add one every week).

Do this until you reach 100 pushups. Use a new notebook, not one that already has stuff in it.

On the first page, write the rules to follow in this process.

Example. Give yourself 2 days of rest.
-The day starts at what time exactly? Specify.
-What happens if you miss a day.

-How do I fix a missed day (for whatever bogus excuse you failed on one day - this will happen so you need to establish a way to save yourself without too much bull).

-When should I consider this experiment to have failed?

You must specify all this or you will fool yourself.

Try to get to 100 pushups using this process.

You will probably fail a few times. You will probably need to restart a few times.

Every day write in your notebook if the pushups were done etc.

This is the most useful exercise I have ever done.

From my Kung-Fu teacher.

If you want to fully see how humans find ways to circumvent laws and will-power, this is the best exercise ever. You will definitely encounter the "snake" in you, and see how incredibly clever it is.

Can you win against this "snake" once you see it?

Best exercise ever (in my opinion).

Supplicant: And then when Adam is put to sleep by God is it possible he's even more connected with God than when awake? And then we go into a pattern of death burial and Resurrection with the great I AM while connected and sustained by environment and God?

Matthieu: Sleeping is about "returning to nature". It's about your conscious mind losing control of your body (this is just a fact, not a metaphor).

So when you sleep your body is more in communion with the natural (like being "naked").

Who is in charge of "nature"?

God.

So in a sense, when you sleep you CAN be in communion with a higher God than what you are used to. The God that created NATURE (the whole thing, not just you).

Matthieu: Are you saying there is more than one God, or that we compartmentalize God? Or maybe that there are different instantiations of God?

Supplicant: No. That's absolutely not what I am saying.

I am saying that we don't know everything about God. Parts we know and parts we don't. We know God through his relation with whoever a covenant is made. The covenant is how we know God as OUR GOD.

We don't know what is not revealed.

Supplicant: I see where you address this further down in the thread and it makes a lot of sense. God is a LOT to understand. I think we do tend to compartmentalize Him, because we can't comprehend the vastness. The Job story really does open that up for us.

Matthieu: When God says "Don't eat from the TKGB but eat from the TL" he is compartmentalizing himself for the safety and protection of Adam.

Same reason God "compartmentalizes" himself when he appears on the box/Ark of the Covenant. It is deadly to see God if not compartmentalized.

Supplicant: ”And when the sun was going down, a deep sleep fell upon Abram; and, lo, an horror of great darkness fell upon him.“
Genesis 15:12 KJV

Matthieu: God says to Abram:

-Waters above: you will get a NEW NAME (new higher identity from above).

-Waters below: your seed will go into exile (to get something foreign from below).

Supplicant: Do you have any advice on how one might thrive in exile?

Matthieu: It's in the Bible.

Become a master of dreams like Joseph and Daniel.
Become a master of reversals like Esther and Mordecai.

Supplicant: [...] I see. Damn. I was thinking about a new position in the past few weeks.

Matthieu: It doesn't mean your dream wasn't also about that. If you are considering a new job then you mind is juggling with this idea while you sleep (considering it and its implications). Could be why this particular representation was in your dream.

The way I currently see it is that there is a general narrative that's always present (or parts of it) but the specific symbols in the dream represent real ideas and passions the sleeper is dealing with. It seems to always be both. It takes details about the person's life for 2nd.

Supplicant: One more- dreams where I am in a fight, but as hard as I try to throw a punch, I can't get my body to move quickly. And, similarly, sometimes it's the opposite, I can throw quickly but upon impact there is no force.

Matthieu: These are two sides of the same coin.

1) Losing mind's control/authority over the body.
2) Losing body's support/power of the mind.

1 is caused by "losing your mind".
2 is caused by "losing your body".

These happen at the same time but we rarely narrate them as simultaneous.

Supplicant: [...] How can this be taken, is too much to interpret the girl to be seen as new reflection/perspective.

Matthieu: IT can also be seen as a new perspective.

More importantly, it can easily represent the new "her" in general. You don't have to focus on the idea that it is the body. It still works in this case.

This is usually only important when the dual symbolism is present in dream.

Here is an example from a real dream.

I am in a car. I stop the car because I feel something is behind my seat. I look back and I see a giant curled up, sleeping on back seat. As I look at him, he grabs my glasses, crushed them and goes back to sleep. I wake up.

The Giant seems to represent my "sleeping body" (or the energies of body sleeping)

My glasses seem to represent my "mind" or "perspective" gets destroyed or "turned off" = losing consciousness.

In this case both symbols (body and mind) are there so useful to point them out.

Supplicant: Would you say that getting hit in the head, or your skull crushed, or any injury to the head would be a symbol of "losing mind".

Matthieu: Most likely. Depends on the context and other elements in the dream, but I would say yes (based on limited info here).
E.g. if an insect attacks your hair it probably represents a "bad idea" or "harmful idea" (based on you waking standards) trying to take hold of the mind.

This is usually a bad sign. If a wasp goes for your hair or eyes or ears. Means some bad idea (perhaps sinful or evil or degenerate) is trying to take control of you mind in sleep. This might sound crazy but very frequent dreams.

Many ways to express these things.

another example. dream: You are looking out the window at a tree, and suddenly you see a swarm of flies coming out of the leaves and branches. They are somehow able to pass through the window of the house! wake up = under attack by bad ideas.

If you practice any sort of prolonged asceticism or even just taking a long term resolution , this type of dreams is a good indication that you should be careful because it tells you that you are currently vulnerable to ideas that will go against your resolution. etc.

Supplicant: Here's a dream that I can't completely understand:

I am in a run down, dirty town, it looks dangerous, I'm looking for a Tandy leather store, but can't find it, I'm close, I know, I am behind a warehouse and a bunch of guys are on a loading dock, a well dressed, Matthieu: Ok got battery running. Thought about a bit.

Sometimes the trick is to ignore the details and focus on general narrative. The look at details.

General narrative is classic.

Disoriented in a decaying place.

Looking for food or flesh

End up in a strange dubious place

Get rewinding experience/ relaxing experience. Often involves water or amusement.

This is clearly the narrative at play here.

The details seem strange at first glance but not after thinking about it.

The gangsters just represent the dubious. this is important in dreams. Often things are stolen or you are trespassing.

Just means you are outside the rules. Where renewal happens.

cigar is a good example of the influence of renewal. Something slightly out of control and irrational that helps you relax (like a dirty joke etc.).

Renewal is related to the "benign rebellion" or the "mild poison". Relaxing related to touching the limit of bad and chaos / absurd.

Why light like a pen. Took me a while to get this but think I do. We push the button or a pen between writing (rest is between working). We push at start and at end of work. This corresponds more to end probably. So the symbol of pushing pen related to rest in that way.

Pushing pen button signals end and new start. Related to rest. Smoke cigar is rest.

It does make sense after all.

Supplicant: There's a kind of "rest" that comes with technology.

Matthieu: The technology that will put humans into eternal sleep (death).

This IS an example of replacing the power of Eve with something else.. something masculine that tries to substitute the feminine.
Modern medicine is also often an example of this. Techno-renewal is related to 666.

Supplicant: The cell phone has become a new member of our body under another authority.

Techno body. Techno control.

Matthieu: 10000000000000000%

This is important. We have a foreign element in our extended body. Soon it will be in our physical body. Beware.

Supplicant: Abraham and Sarah received the ability to conceive through laughter, even though they were “as good as dead”.

Matthieu: YES.

1 000 000 BUKAZOIDS have been deposited to your account for this insight.

Supplicant: Is flying the opposite of flooding? Control of space?

Matthieu: I think flying is usually an expression of the mind trying to escape the body as it gets flooded (or re-wilded).

The flying is often accompanied by loss of control actually. The flying or floating is often not very well controlled. Like a kite in the wind or a balloon.

It seems to happen when the re-wilding process is either too much to handle (so you flee and somehow escae by flying up or floating up) or if the flooding is seen as not concerning at all (boring even). It's both about not identifying with the re-wilding. The mind just escapes.
I'm still trying to understand this. Why I need many examples. Having more examples from very different people has definitely helped with this recently, but still processing the many examples (hundreds).

By the way, Enoch could be interpreted with this pattern perhaps. The world is going to get flooded so Enoch escapes into heaven. He does not identify with the flooding of the world. On the other hand, Noah experiences the flood.
It makes sense that the flood narrative is analogous to a dream pattern. It's basically a cosmic dream. The flood is about the world being forced to "Rest" and return to nature.

The flood is like a falling asleep of the world and then a new start (a new day).

Supplicant: can you please elaborate on what you mean by "re-wilding"?

Matthieu: Re-wilding is just a return to nature. Like Jasher (not sure this is the right expression in English, to be honest). It's just when things go back to the natural (no artificial imposition of meaning from reason)

Letting the land take over again. Example in agriculture.

Matthieu: I certainly haven't given up, I can promise you that.

I think there are ways to beat "them" and it has something to do with explaining the symbolism of what they are doing in a way that will show they are trying to do something CLOSE to what needs to be done but wrongly.

It needs to be demonstrated that what's happening is part of a natural pattern, BUT that some people are trying to control it - "fake it". This is the real problem. Once this has been clearly demonstrated I hope it will be possible to change their fake renewal into a real one.

We need to learn how to clearly distinguish between Eve and Satan, which is not that easy actually sometimes. We need to know exactly when Eve becomes Satan and then point it out very clearly. I think this would have the desired effect.

Supplicant: Unrelated but maybe not, what do you think of Guenon's remark that things going wrong (like the "fall" into modernity and then post-modernity) is a temporary disequilibrium at a lower level of reality in service of a greater equilibrium at a higher level of reality? And that there is a sought of inevitability to these things....

Matthieu: This is often true.

That is what "sleep" is. You lose your ability to stand and lose control and it falls into nonsense reality for a while, but only for a greater good. To fix certain issued and to get new ideas and energy.

But. I think the antichrist is a fake version of it. The antichrist is a fake-controlled version of this renewal. It's a deception of Eve too (who is responsible to bring about the sleeping-healing-transformation feedback events). It's a male agent that is fraudulent and pretending to have the same powers as Eve to kill Adam. The number 666 is a parody of 7.
It's a false approximation of renewal (7) and rest and returning to nature. It's a highly controlled and highly deterministic simulation of a natural renewal process.

Our current times.

Supplicant: Interesting, so both comedy and horror address "dangerous" things, taboos. How we treat them can turn them into clowns or monsters. A monster requires fight or flight, a clown can entertain/renew. Easier to jiujitsu a clown than a monster. Not sure how the laughter/fertility connection is made though.

Matthieu: Why do lands become infertile? What do we do to make them fertile again (and try to keep an ancient mind frame here).
Supplicant: They become infertile through overuse, and must be left alone for a couple years to be renewed. Use and then rest?

Matthieu: Abraham needed to wait. Sarah got impatient so she tried to give him a foreigner instead. This leads to fall. Must go into exile etc. After waiting enough Sarah became fertile again.

Story of Abraham in a nutshell.

Supplicant: Thanks, how does the laughter fit in though? Just not seeing it. Waiting leads to renewal. Laughter leads to renewal, but it still feels abstract to me. Laughter doesn't seem to equal waiting...

Matthieu: Thanks, how does the laughter fit in though? Just not seeing it. Waiting leads to renewal. Laughter leads to renewal, but it still feels abstract to me. Laughter doesn't seem to equal waiting...

The story of Abraham is all about waiting and testing.

Supplicant: I'm still stuck on comedy and laughter.

Is being serious all the time a way of "drying out", and comedy a way to renew that?

Matthieu: Safe renewal without flooding involves also testing the limits of what you can handle.

Humor in a nutshell.

Supplicant: Testing?

Matthieu: Testing. Trying. Tasting. Playing. Joking. Pretending.

Supplicant: What was the alien intelligence in the case of Egypt?
Matthieu: It was God himself that had not fully revealed his identity to Abraham. Only to Moses was it revealed. Abraham did not really know what God wanted clearly. God told him to do some stuff but Abraham was wandering in confusion most of his life, not really sure of what would happen. Not many people get this. Abraham knew God in a confused manner. IT was not clear. He was in the process of getting to know this new God (not the gods of his ancestors - not the familiars gods).

God's higher identity and will was being revealed to Abraham during his life.

Supplicant: It also feels abstract to me. So testing is a safe way to experience TKGB, the story in a nutshell looks to me like: Sarah gives Abraham foreigner->exile act->new tree of life? Isn't this like eating the forbidden fruit and going through death whereas rumination was the better way?

Matthieu: That's what I think. They were not able to wait. The story of Abraham is like the story of the fall. Except in this case we also see solutions to it more clearly. In the story of the fall there is not a lot of details to solutions.

Supplicant: If they never partook of the Tree of knowledge of good and evil or they did it when God gives permission later. How would the symbolism change?

Matthieu: There would be no exile in between. Or perhaps more truly, the "exile" in between would be good (perhaps not even called exile, but that is not so important). It was not seen as a problem but just a step to go through in order to grow.

Supplicant: I suppose it would be something like being able to jump from a 'space' dominant perspective to a 'time' dominant perspective, without it leading to a fall, but rather a "rise (lack of a better word)".
Playing with space/time without space becoming pharaoh or time becoming flood. Ppl have to be led into truth, not be told it. Big difference.
Every person emulates/imitates better than ruminates. Telling people stuff supposes that they will just sit down by themselves and think it through - prob. they won't. They'd rather die. Just like us: people have to be led.

Matthieu: Nobody wants to change perspectives. It's like death. So there are ways to "try on" new perspectives without committing to anything. This is key.

Supplicant: What is "the axis of time"? And how does it mediate between heaven and earth?

Matthieu: If you want a practical example, here is one. The CIA (or any secret service) is an example of the axle of time because it operates covertly. Once you operate covertly you fall under different rules. I could get into these rules but that would take a while.

Another example of the axle of time (perhaps a more obvious one) is a bribe. It's a way to covertly bypass official rules of a hierarchy or any official system. An entire system cam be sabotaged and subverted using these influences.

Many such cases.

Another example is blackmail.

Another example is credit

(lending money is an influence of time. It can and has been influential enough to take over any kingdom)Another example is blackmail.

This is definitely a good example.

I have a feeling it's related to the reason why differentiating between Christ and the Antichrist might be difficult during the end times.

Supplicant: What does renewal actually mean in this context? Metamorphosis? And is it possible to do "wait" long enough? Or will we always be removed in the end?

Matthieu: Even Christ had to die and resurrect. These people want to avoid it at all costs.

The antichrist is a fake masculine usurpation of Eve's natural renewal powers.

A butterfly metamorphosizes but it does not use a machine it built while in caterpillar form to control the process.

Supplicant: But isn't creating a cocoon a form of techne to the caterpillar?

Matthieu: I was thinking about this recently.

Is the cocoon technology? Is a spiderweb technology? Is a nest technology? etc.

Do animals build tech? (depends on the definition I suppose)

The cocoon comes out of the caterpillars body. That's probably not a detail in the matter...

More importantly, I don't think most animals invent technology (if it even is technology). They don't invent these "machines" (if they even are machines). It seems to have developed slowly and gradually in nature, following the natural cadence of things... (which is like waiting).

One could argue that human tech has been developing at that cadence too (if we consider it on the whole throughout human existence). And so, one could say that even computers were spawned naturally over time, as the result of a slow development. (playing devil's advocate here...).

But I don't buy it (at least not with the above argument)

I view current high-tech as almost a "alien tech". It is very different than anything produced in the recent past of humanity. Relatively speaking it seems to have suddenly appeared out of nowhere and grew quickly.

I have difficulty viewing recent tech as a homegrown natural process. I often suspect it came from some alien civilization (or something equivalent). I have no evidence for any of this so I'm just having fun here.

Supplicant: It comes from the secret civilization that secretly controls our government. Think Wakanda type situation.

Possibly related to Antarctica.

Zero evidence either but this is fun.

Matthieu: I pretty much think it comes from the "Nephilim".
There, I said it.
I can speculate as much as I want because speculation is what intuitive people do and there's nothing wrong with it.

Matthieu: Agreed. It's Nebuchadnezzar all over again.

666 is a combination of the flood and the golden statue of Nebuchadnezzar. A great time of degeneracy and flooding combined with a strong will to remain in power and maintain a system.

Matthieu: Samson himself looks like King David.

Supplicant: God destroys the enemy. Samson took it upon himself to do it. Israel, when they decided to destroy their enemy when God didn't tell them, had the ark removed from them.

Matthieu: Samson was a judge and (according to the story) things he did were inspired by the spirit. He was moved by the spirit to cause scandals so that wars would erupt etc.

There's not much stranger in the Bible than the stories of Samson. That's because it's just a step towards David.

Supplicant: I'm not sure he was inspired by the Spirit, at least most of the time. Its not mentioned. He broke every vow. He seems more an anti-judge, focused on inward rather than outward.

Matthieu: I think you may not fully understand what the book of Judges is about. The judges are there to judge Israel as much as the enemies of Israel. They are there very often to "judge themselves"

Most of the time it does say that Samson was moved by the spirit. It's a strange book.

Supplicant: [missing text]

Matthieu: Only Christ had what it takes to love his enemies and still come out on top. I don't think it was possible before that.

Samson came close to "loving his enemy" but did not have what it took for it to work.

David was better at it.

Jesus was perfect at it.

Supplicant: I see what you mean about the Spirit moving him, though there are many situations where he moved out of his own volition... or so, it seems. It's really a strange story.

Matthieu: Yeah it's probably the strangest story in the Bible apart from the story of Jesus which is the strangest story ever, in my opinion. We take it for granted sometimes but it's not exactly a normie-tier narrative. Only the Resurrection gives it a meaningful ending. Samson did not have that yet.

Even all the stories of the saints are stranger than the story of Samson (in a way). Samson was just slightly weird because he loved his enemy but ended up dying (so the lesson is "don't fall in love with enemy" if you want to live.) Still common sense in a way.

But then Jesus says "love your enemy". Now that is out of the ordinary and very new. But Samson was leading up to it in a very ironic and counterproductive way.

Supplicant: Man-made flood - wipe away the past.

Man-made renewal - we will complete a new world, we will be the remnant, we will create a new pattern.

Great Reset is a rebellion against God.

Great Reset is the Tower of Babel.

Matthieu: And the answer to it is Abraham, who is someone who was more able to WAIT for God to bring about a new pattern (through Abraham but not fully under his control).

The answer to the subversion of the rainbow covenant (by Ham) and the empire that was built out of this subverted religion: the Tower of Babel, was Abraham and Sarah.

They had some struggles along the way and it too a really long time, but eventually (in God's time) it happened.

Supplicant: Having sexual improper sexual intercourse is an example of "Joining things in confusion"

When things are "joined in confusion" it means there is no logical or purposeful reason to do it (no higher reason).

Matthieu: Having improper sexual intercourse is an example of "Joining things in confusion"/

When things are "joined in confusion" it means there is no logical or purposeful reason to do it (no higher reason).
So in that sense, it is a blatant example of the "rainbow pattern".

The original meaning of the rainbow was about God promising to give all the time needed to "find a reason" for things that didn't. It's the basis (the permission) to ruminate, basically. Take the time needed.

"Humans are bad since their youth...."

(so there must be some secret reason for it - is implied here.)

This verse is basically the Biblical version of "born this way". Of course that sentiment has also been subverted by the cult, like the rainbow itself.

God seems to be essentially saying something like "you have all the time you need to figure out what is the higher reason for this 'bad' stuff. Don't worry, take your time...

The rainbow is both the hope that these issues will eventually be resolved, and a promise that the time will be given to resolve it (the world won't be destroyed like the first time in a flood).

This is what it means "the rainbow is a positive spin on the TKGB".

It's not just saying "don't eat from TKGB" but instead it is saying: "you have all the time in the world to figure it out".
The true rainbow covenant is the covenant of rumination (and sleeping --> dreams).

It was subverted by Ham (some might say by Noah's wine, but not me).

Supplicant: What does the stone symbolize [talking about certain stone that was mentioned]?

I'm thinking something foundational.

Matthieu: It's the uncut stone (often known as a stumbling stone)

This stone is what can renew dry branches.
It can also be a stumbling stone but you don't have to stumble on it. You can just understand what it's really for and get water (renewal) from it instead.
Prideful dry branches want to "hit the stone with their staff" because they don't see the full picture.

They see themselves as having the whole truth and nothing but the truth (a monopoly on truth). They never look at themselves as part of renewal. They have no patience either.
Moses hitting the stone with his staff is very similar to Cain killing Abel, and bleeding him out. In fact, it can be seen as the exact same pattern.

It's also like the Pharisees who hated Jesus and wanted to "hit him with their staff" to bleed him out.

Supplicant: Incredible!
I feel this is very true for myself.
What is the solution?

Matthieu: The solution is:

1) Asking the stone for water instead of hitting it with your staff/branch.

2) Then waiting for the stone to give you some water in its time.

First part is already too hard for most, so imagine the second part.

That's why I say "we should not be too harsh".

> Supplicant: Is this because the stone (source of renewal) must be a foreign perspective? How does this relate to David, who "worked" for Saul earlier on? Or perhaps playing the harp is more like David helping Saul rest . . .

> Saul thought David was "working for him" but David was there to renew him (heal him with music). David was superior to Saul so eventually when the music "turned against him" because of his pride, he did everything he could to kill him. But the stone (David in this scenario) had learned a few tricks since the times of Moses. It figured out how to always escape the attempts from the old authority (the dried up branch) at pinning it down and forcing it to renew (controlling the renewal process by integrating it). This made Saul so crazy (that he could not keep David him under his robe) that he tried to kill him the rest of his life.

Eventually Saul ended up causing his own death.

This is what happens when you refuse to be renewed properly by something you can't control.

David does not do anything against Saul. But still, David makes Saul look bad. David's "new fruits" make Saul's "old dry fruits" look worthless and unappealing (like it was never really that great to begin with) so Saul gets angry and tries to "hold David under his robe".
This is an age old story and it keeps happening, and will happen again and again. The problem with Saul (and anyone else who has a big stick) is that they see themselves as invincible and perfect. They think they have a monopoly but they don't (God has the monopoly).

When God sees a tree that no longer produces new fruit, he gives the old tree and chance. He sprouts a new tree that produces a lot of new fruits so that the old tree can see it and be a bit jealous of it, and maybe return to the source and learn how to produce fruits again.
But this almost never happens. Old trees are prideful and no longer have humility. Old tree are afraid of contradicting themselves so they don't change or abandon key things would make them fresh again (for fear of looking contradictory or flawed).
So instead, the old dry tree tries to steal the fruit from the new trees and pretend it was theirs, and when they can't do that (because eventually it shows), they start to zealously attack the new tree to make sure nobody sees its fruits. It tries to overshadow it.
For a while, the old tree is able to overshadow the new tree with its dry branches (because it is old, it has a lot of branches and casts a very big shadow). This works for a time and the new tree has to stay in the shadows. But gradually, the new tree grows and grows.
Eventually some of the branches of the new tree are able to "get out of the shadow" of the old tree or "get out from under its robe" and the everyone can plainly see that the new tree is superior to the old tree, and everyone is forced to see the old tree for what it has become.

Supplicant: [...] After war, anyone who had killed had to go into a sweat lodge to purify themselves.

There's absolutely something to a "dust bath" and a "sweat bath".

As Matthieu said, there is something about "getting dirty", and then a sweat lodge of "getting clean". And truly, if anyone wants to protect themselves, they absolutely have to "get dirty".

The pacifists who refuse are unable to protect themselves and will be easily killed.

Matthieu: I'm pretty sure taking a "dust bath" is also part of Navi Seals training. Like "get down in the dirt" or "get sandy". And then the guy has to cover himself with sand or dust. Helps to see how "becoming one with nature" really is a big part of getting into a psychology of war. There is definitely something intuitive and practical about it. It's quite clear.

Supplicant: This feels like a way to force a trance state for battle. Do you see any relationship between this and the pattern of dreams you described (lose body/mind, find body/mind)?

Matthieu: War is definitely related to dreams. No doubt about it.

It's also about "returning to nature" in order to have a "competition" for the purpose of reordering things.

Many dreams are about competitions and battles. Either that or you are having to choose sides etc.

Supplicant: The Lakota have an ancient story about a "great race" that was used to decide the natural order of things.

This was at a time when humans were eating animals, and animals eating humans. Also all creatures could speak the same language.

Definitely fits with what you are saying.

Matthieu: by the way everything I talk about on twitter is just about one subject. It's all related and the same pattern.

Conspiracy theories are also related to dreams.

Supplicant: That's all part of the same category right? Dreams, War, Chaos, Eve, Cain, Time, Renewal? Correct me if I am wrong, still working this out.

Matthieu: I would not put Cain in that category without serious side notes, but the rest is definitely right

Abel is about renewal first and foremost. Cain was about continuing the lineage. But because Cain killed Abel he experienced a "forced renewal" which lead to the end of his lineage

Supplicant: Great insight. Matthieu is the one to listen to here. But perhaps another element to add here in the context of battle is embodying a more primal state of being.

I'm not only prepared to return to the dirt, but I am nature itself coming to return you to the dirt.

Matthieu: 100%

This is also what Samson is all about.
Samson (in a sense) embodies the raw forces of Nature (the natural cycle).

It's why he does not use weapons. He uses "animals" as weapons. It's raw power of nature that he turns against his enemies (and himself too).

"Clownwars" is what Samson is all about.

I think Black Elk and (maybe?) Crazy horse were also considered clowns. Is that right? (to anyone who might know). I remember for Black Elk but not sure for Crazy horse (but with a name like that, it's very likely).

Matthieu: I don't trust democracy

People are very easy to manipulate and those in power are master manipulators. I don't see schizophrenia in the governments of most countries. I see them all following the exact same agendas. Left, right, left, right, like a being using 2 arms to do things.

IT all looks like theatre to me. Everything I see in current politics looks like a distraction and i'm supposed to root for one of the 2 teams. Meanwhile all the agendas being put in place (not being promised or talked about vainly) are following an obvious trajectory.

Supplicant: I've had conversations with Christians before and when I try to bring up problems happening with Epstein or stuff like that, a lot of the time they will try to say that the real battle is with the enemy within and not the enemy without.

Matthieu: As if you can't fight a battle on two fronts. Within and without.

Not many people are actually fighting the battle within either so it's usually just an excuse to live a comfortable life and not upset anything if you can avoid it.
Jesus was fighting both levels too or he would have just stopped after fasting and fighting temptations in the cave.

Supplicant: I have a ton of sins. At the same time, an overwhelming temptation to educate people on how to live, & always have my opinion heard on what is right and wrong.

I agree about two fronts. But I believe the “without” front is often a temptation to ignore the plank for the speck.

Matthieu: I also agree. But I also think the "within" front is often a temptation (or an excuse) to ignore the obvious satanic takeover happening before our eyes and to just hide like cowards instead of going into battle and risking our livelihood and maybe even our lives. I agree it's an error to only look at the spec in another's eye and never look at the plank in your.

But is this the current situation?
Isn't it also possible that we are looking at specs in our own eyes in order to avoid seeing the obvious plank in another's eye?

Matthieu: My guess is that it has something to do with Mt. Hermon.

Supplicant: Fallen angels Mt Hermon or transfiguration Mt Hermon?

Matthieu: The first precedes the second. So the first can imitate or parody the second. Like Ishmael "mocks" Isaac. Like Samson "mocks" David. The Fallen Angels will also "mock" the return of Christ.

In general, TKGB mocks TL. The donkey (Hamor) always precedes the rider.

Supplicant: Hand drums can be found in cultures across the world, due to the fact of their universal symbolism.

Drum = Time
Stick = Space

The drum stick (tree branch) hits or “strikes” a circular drum.

The drum is made of a tightly bound rawhide, but when struck, it causes vibration.

Matthieu: Here is a simple image to reinforce this imagery.

Think of "Space" as a pot or basket: one of the most important tools in wilderness to gather resources etc..

Then when you are not using the pot, you can "flip the empty pot upside-down" and you have your drum: "Time".

A lot of information is contained in this simple concrete example. It's actually one of the first "glimpses" I had way before I thought about writing a book about this subject (that and weaving).

By the way, this symbolism still holds today, because people who do protests (at least around here) often use pots as drums when they do their marches. It's like a revolutionary tradition of sorts.

Supplicant: Am I right to say that the drum stick is a symbol of space? I see it as a tool, an extension of the body, and it’s connection to a tree.

And of course it’s association with hitting or striking.

I can almost see the same imagery with a shield and a lance.

In traditional cultures there was something called a “war drum”, so they are probably not too disconnected.

Matthieu: Definitely. Even better you can see the drumstick as a spoon, which is another very obvious symbol of space. A tool to eat-integrate. But the you subvert it and use it to "make music" (make time) when you hit the inverted pot with it.
Was is definitely the realm of time (competing principles on the wheel) so banging spear on shield is def about creating the music of war to help "pump yourself up" for war.
Also to taunt the enemy. When both parties think they can benefit from war... This is what causes war. So you may have to pump yourself up or pump the other up (sometimes with false confidence) and you taunt yourself and other.

The most obvious example of using the knowledge of good and bad is in Solomon's judgment of the two whores. It's not JUST about discerning between good and bad. It also involves using a "simulated temporary bad" for a higher purpose.

In this seemingly undecidable court case, Solomon chooses to create a fake but temporary bad judgment (he proposes to cut the baby in half).

But then he quickly reverses this temporary bad judgment and gives reason to the woman who refused to submit to this bad solution.
He showed them an inverted mirror and it tricked them into revealing their true nature. He then removed this simulated bad solution (death of baby) and used the indirect knowledge it provided to correct the judgment by inversion. Using the bad for a higher good (life of baby).
Imagine if all legal cases were solved in this manner...

Better not eat (too often) from the tree of the knowledge of good and bad...

Supplicant: mistake 1: think Adam and Eve eating from TKGB gives them the discernment, while it actually results in the confusion of GB mistake 2: even the knowledge of GB in itself is not discernment only, because discernment cuts off bad from good (temp solution) while this is higher?

Matthieu: The TKGB is "in the office" of the second born. The second born is rooted in the future. The first born is rooted in the past. When the firstborn tries to integrate TKGB it causes the fall. But the second born is allowed to use TKGB for healing purposes and for renewal. Sometimes the firstborn is too prideful and wants to overstep his boundaries into the "office" of the second born to control and integrate the renewal powers of TKGB. This is a huge error which either turns him into a "sodomite vampire" or leads to the end of his lineage. Cain tried to control the powers of renewal that were in the office of Abel (the second born). He eventually turned onto a dweller of tents and a musician, but he was unable to renew the world without massive death. Instead the world was flooded completely. It's a dangerous thing for the firstborn to take it upon himself in "this world" and claim the powers of renewal that are meant for the future: the "world to come". It leads to the flood (not the simulated kind). Never mind me. I'm just talking gibberish in this world (by talking now about things that probably belong to the future).

Supplicant: so the secondborn's power is to see God in what is yet to come (even if the potential is bad now). And when the actual order is corrupt, then that's the only place God will be. But was it too far away in the future in the case of Abel? Or do you just infer impatience from Cain?

Matthieu: Sometimes it's very far. In that sense we can't be too hard on Cain for not being willing to wait. But the real problem with Cain is when he wants to control everything. This is possible before the fall but not after. Why we separate the king and the priest after the fall. Part of the job of the second born is to create a retracted world. To stay away from this world and the things that cannot be properly covered yet. Something like what the Amish have done or even what religion often does). So Abel sometimes must "retract to the mountain" and stay there, refusing to come back down, while Cain is busy fighting wars and being secretly subverted below the mountain. But this is also a temporary measure. More commonly he is forced into exile until he finds a solution.

Supplicant: Cain cannot go up and join Abel on the mountain because Cain is in some ways hosting Abel in that he is creating (perhaps unintentionally) the space for Abel to renew in the next world? If they are both up there, renewal comes in this world (flood) as opposed to the next (fire)?

Matthieu: There's 2 scenarios.

1) Retraction into a smaller "safe space"
2) Exile into a larger "strange world"

When Cain protects Abel the "safe space" can be created for rumination.

Supplicant: how do you see Abel coming back greater after his blood is spilled? At the larger scale, I can see the flood as being the greater return of the power of renewal. I wonder if you see that pattern also at the scale of Cain's lineage with Jubal and Jabal, or even Lamech and co.

Matthieu: Yes. Jubal and Jabal can (and is) seen as a sort of "revenge of Abel" on Cain. (by the way these names are related to the root of the name Abel) Or an example of Cain being forced to acknowledge the role of Abel that he wanted to sweep under the rug. But really I was using Abel as a type of all "second born". So the statement included Jacob and Joseph etc. Any second born that gets exiled and later returns.

Supplicant: What about when the second born tries to take the place of the first born, like with Jacob? It's not clear because Jacob does end up being the one who is the seed of the future Israel.

Matthieu: How to tell if wrongful subversion is occurring?

There are important signs which Ever is supposed to recognize. This is part of the function of the simulation. It also serves as a test to know if renewal is needed. Eve is supposed to test her husband for "blindness". Can he tell the difference between his left and his right? She tests him for this sign (among others). If the answer ii "No" then she has the duty to unleash her womanly powers of renewal which she uses the second born for. She gives a mission to the second born for the future. Usually it involves fleeing and returning later. So basically Eve is supposed to know all the secrets but she too can make errors. She can miss the timescale and be tricked in different ways.

Supplicant: Yes asking about subversion. First born is a continuation of the father and second born that of the mother so must be the renewal if the first born has the blindness of the father. Layers of subversion build up as the agents of renewal using subversion themselves get subverted.
Matthieu: When the sun falls, the moon takes over during the night to bring back the sun renewed on the next day (and also preserving and reflecting its light during the night).

But eventually even the moon goes dark... then what?

The stars dance around thinking they are king for a night

Supplicant: Can blindness be a good thing if your eyes were opened too soon, or if you see too much, like a mystery being revealed before its time? The blindness gives you time to use your other senses (especially hearing) to differentiate between good and bad.

Matthieu: Blindness happens automatically when you need to rest. Why your eyes are forced shut before you fall asleep. So yes.

Supplicant: Can you give us some examples of this kind of testing?

Matthieu: Rebekah tested Isaac's blindness by crudely replacing his first born son (his right hand) by his second born son (his left hand). She tested his sense of taste by replacing wild meat with tamed meat. He fell for both.... It's bed time now, you are too tired now. Sleepy time.

Supplicant: Is it right to think of Eve as the second born?

Matthieu: Not exactly because she can't replace Adam if he dies. But she is the source of renewal (she makes sure the second born is chosen over the first if needed). Her role is above the second born but it is related in many ways.

Supplicant: I know also that David was called the first born even though he was not firstborn according to the flesh.

But isn't Joseph the one that renews Jacob? You said the second born renews. Is it because of the misalignment of intention and factuality that this confusion happens?

Matthieu: When I say the firstborn, I usually (always actually) am referring to the firstborn in the facts (not the theory).

But yes, the misalignment is what causes the second born (or in this case the 11th born) to supersede the ones that came before him.

Supplicant: The “listening to fake criticisms” is a major problem these days, if the current principles shook themselves out of this, they’d behave totally differently (i.e. unbelievably forcefully and confidently, to the terror of their enemies, ofc). If anything the ones making these false criticisms are definitely weaker materially, they cannot face the current “kings” in an all-out war, so they have to resort to conniving and persuasion like the Witch of Endor.

Matthieu: Hence the importance of differentiating between the advice of your wife who loves you and the advice of a snake who wants to kill you.

At this point it's pretty damn obvious if you ask me. But once everything is fallen everyone becomes blind and intoxicated.

Supplicant: Christ is the firstborn yet he seems to take on the role of both the first born and the second born. How is this?

At some point I thought Jesus is second born in relation to John the Baptist, similar to the relationship between Jacob and Esau.
Esau and JTB wore animal skin.

Matthieu: This is a complicated issue, to be honest. The firstborn just means "the one that came first" (came first into manifestation). But there is also the firstborn in the sense that it the first manifested the intention of the father.

There are all sorts of scenarios around this in the Bible. For example. In the story of Jacob. The firstborn (in fact) was Reuben. BUT the firstborn IN INTENTION was actually Joseph.

In this case the scenario is that Jacob's intention was to have Joseph through Rachel. But he was tricked and his wife was actually Leah. The intention of Jacob (to have a son by Rachel) actually happened much later, after he had many other sons that were not according to his first intention.

This is why he gets Rachel "on credit" by the way. It means only later (seven years later) will Rachel bear his FIRST intention. So in a sense, Joseph is the firstborn of Jacob.
We can even say "in the spiritual perspective", Joseph is the firstborn. But in the factual perspective, Reuben is the firstborn.

Similarly with Ishmael and Isaac. In theory, Isaac is the firstborn, but in the facts, Ishmael was.

Supplicant: So much talk about the second son, how does the firstborn make things right? He's obviously not bound to always fail.

Matthieu: >Why so much talk about the function of the second born?

Same reason we talk about what happens after the fall and we don't talk much about life in the Garden (what if there was no fall?)

Because there WAS a fall, and the firstborn DOES grow prideful and stubborn in his errors.

But to answer your question. The firstborn can just repent of his errors and listen to stranger once in a while (but also not make the mistake of listening to the false criticisms of his enemy who just hates his guts because he wants to take his place).

It does happen sometimes.

Supplicant: How do we identify reality but prevent ourselves from paying admission to a hall of mirrors? We all want to know what's really being done, but there's a risk that we end up in an attention trap if we focus too much on proving/debunking conspiracies.

Matthieu: I don't subscribe to the hoopla about attention. Maybe this just comes from my experience in martial arts. You have to "pay attention" to your enemies and keep your guard up or said enemies will punch you in the face, and then you'll be "paying attention" to the floor for a while.

Supplicant: Fair point. I guess my concern is how to pay attention and identify conspiracies without becoming distracted/consumed in a "bread and circuses" way? To use your example: watching your opponent is necessary, but how to not buy into the feints?

Matthieu: Humans have the ability to pay attention to things in a peripheral manner without every crystallizing any meaning. Our peripheral vision is actually better at spotting anomalies than our focused vision. It happens automatically. You don't have to put any effort into it. It does not require mental energy. In fact peripheral vision is a source of renewal for the mind. So you should naturally use your peripheral vision all the time until an alarm sounds. The alarm actually comes "from the body" not the mind. You body knows a whole lot of things your mind is clueless about. It can sense an enemy and danger quite effectively. So you listen to your gut. That should just be a given. When you "body" sound the alarm, then you enter into a fluid sort of focus often called "keeping your head on a swivel". I'm still not focused on anything in particular here. Just letting my peripheral vision do its job and letting it operate naturally.

In a way this is the opposite of focusing on something. It's radar mode. Focusing on something at this stage hinders that natural ability. If there is a danger then your peripheral vision will catch it and

f it then becomes clear a threat is coming for you, you identify the threats and act accordingly. Depending on the situation you do what is best. Once you have the threats now you focus on what they do and act accordingly. If you have a lot of training it basically just happens.

Part of the crazy conspiracy spell is the narrative that having a conspiracy theory is the same as being ADAMANT about something. This is the first error. A theory is a theory. It is fluid and you can have more than one. It the equivalent of "keeping you head on a swivel".

You follow you gut. Then when you sense danger you start to swivel. Scanning for possible threats. This is was more natural than people think. Men especially are built for this. The "conspiracy theory mind" is actually very natural. And there is nothing wrong within it.

When I see elites and eggheads talking AGAINST conspiracy theories. Then my alarm really starts to beep. "We are in danger". I think it's pretty clear at this point that we are. Most people are now admitting there are high level conspiracies going on. We are under attack.

Supplicant: Jealous and overzealous deadly combination. If only her task was a higher one.

Matthieu: Who is jealous and overzealous in this scenario? Is it really Phoebe, or is it actually Monica?

Why Cain killed Abel, Moses hit the water-stone, and the Pharisees killed Jesus.

Good thing Jesus knew how to turn exile and death into rest and renewal.

Supplicant: The sin of "I should be held in higher regard"? The clip seems to have some of that but it looks a little more like the parent that does too much for the child. "Let me do it because then it will be done right."

Matthieu: It's about the sin of wanting to control everything. Even renewal, which is losing some control. Phoebe was able to take a few things from Monica's control (cups ice) so by these things the recreation was able to happen. Whoever wrote this is a genius, in my opinion. Or very intuitive.
Today is a good day for "moon posting".

Supplicant: Wait, it's a new moon, not a full moon. Wouldn't that mean that things in the dark, stay hidden for now?

Matthieu: New moon better than full moon (for this sort of insight).

Supplicant: Do you find the lunar phases change receptivity to the concepts? What type of post is good for full moons?

Matthieu: I find it strange that few people seem to "feel" the influence of the moon on their mind and ideas (or maybe are not aware of it?). For me the influence of the moon is so strong that I have to actively calm myself down in certain periods.

Supplicant: Is it that Rachel(Cain) tries to marginalize Phoebe(Abel), but Phoebe ends up becoming the cornerstone of the party anyway? Like the story of Joseph.

Matthieu: Monica likes to control everything so she wants things done her way and her way only. So she can't "co-host" as she had promised Phoebe. So Phoebe plays the awful hand she was dealt and manages to win by squeezing out all the juice it contained.
Trying to make a party (rest and recreation) by controlling every aspect of the process is a mistake. Rest is mostly about losing control and relaxing (without losing everything in the process). This is why Monica can't do it well and why Phoebe wins here. It is in her domain.

Supplicant: Do you think a story must decide a winner? In other words, 'discerning' is the ultimate goal?

Matthieu: For me, it's usually about understanding what role different parts of a whole must play and how even when things "go wrong" it still happens overall (although with more suffering and some waste of time in certain cases)

Supplicant: Ah, I missed that.

Trying to have total control of a party. Makes perfect sense.

Monica says "the guests aren't doing what I want them to do - what they're supposed to do.". Monica is controlling every aspect of what is supposed to be a party. Everything except cups and ice.

Because a party is about letting loose and letting go of control, and the cups and ice are the only things not being controlled, they are naturally the best elements of the party.

Yep. Makes perfect sense.

The cups are used for ornamentation rather than as a tool.

Everyone is fulling up on empty ice instead of eating food.

That's all I got.

Supplicant: Monica: "I am in control, and to control you and your dissatisfaction with how controlling I am I will relegate you to an unwanted remnant"

Phoebe: "I will take this leftover element and raise it to such a high degree that it will crown the entire event, subverting your control".

Supplicant: Do you know the modern myth that a lazy Montenegrin supposedly killed a deadly Samurai in a 1:1 battle?

The former is known for only moving when necessary, the latter we all know. Just wanted to share as similar example see the boring historical source: [https://historychronicles.org/aleksandar-lekso-saicic-vs-samurai-truth-or-myth/]

Supplicant: Do stumbling stones only become pinnacle stones when they roll down from a mountain?
And how does an uncut stone end up on the ground?

Supplicant: Doesn't have to roll down. In Nebuchadnezzar's dream it hit the feet (became stumbling stone) and then the rest of the material from statue was carried away by wind. Until that stone became a mountain that filled the whole world.

Supplicant: Yes but it seems to that this doesn't work with just any old stone. The fact that it comes from above is significant, no?

Matthieu: All stumbling stones are potentially stones of refreshment but at different stages of development. Unfortunately you can't know that until it's too late. That's why God tells Adam when it's permitted. God TOLD Moses to get water from the stone (in its time without forcing it)

"...He fell with his face to the ground and prayed, "My Father, if it is possible, may this cup be taken from me. Yet not as I will, but as you will." Even Jesus rejected "The Cup". But since he accepted this loss of control, he became a "master of the cup" (similar to Joseph).

Supplicant: In an attempt to control, Monica gives the #cupsandice to Phoebe. But it was forced renewal (attempting to control space/time), so it brought about sin.

This cast Monica into exile, and she was "dead-to-me" from the guests' perspective.

Phoebe was able to take the seed from the good fruit that remained in the situation, and was able to raise it to such a level that the renewal, the spirit of the party/rest, was able to flourish.*[1]

But since the party was mostly Monica's attempt at forced renewal, the elevated sustenance of Monica's Tuscan finger food was subverted by Phoebe's offering of "change covered in rainbows" (snowcones).

(Guessing Now)
Therefore, Chandler expresses regret after accidentally revealing his desire for the lower offering. I haven't seen the episode, but assuming this is where Monica realizes she underestimated Phoebe and understands that she needs to apologize/repent, Monica accepts the situation and approves of Chandler taking Phoebe's offering.

*[1] This clicked for me after reading your "The Cup" post above, and I went back and saw the added context from the Friend's episode that aligned with that. I just wanted to add this note to highlight the symbolic lesson taught here by the pop-culture—>biblical-story post and the added context from your replies to each post.

Supplicant: The Chief Cupbearer is better for a party than the Chief Baker.

A Crazy Halloween Thread: The curse of the undead. Those who try to renew themselves with a spirit of pride, jealousy or impatience, will turn into vengeful Vampires who desire to control everything, OR change into wild Beasts that wander in exile. Imagine a power-mad vampire, suffering from arithmomania, who imposes a census on everything out of jealousy and paranoia.
He can't stand looking at himself in a mirror so he forces everyone else to look into a false mirror, which is cartoonishly manipulated by double standards.

If you wash this Vampire in holy water, he turns into a parasitical bat and escapes.

If you force him to look into a true mirror, he goes mad and breaks it with his ancient cane.

A curse of seven years then falls upon him, as he turns back into an anonymous wandering Werewolf.

Will the Beast ever learn its lesson, or will it turn back into a Vampire and repeat this terrible cycle? ... over and over again...
So goes the curse of the fallen undead, the Raphaim, Anakim, and Nephilim: crystallizations of aborted attempts at renewal.

In the end-times, these fallen entities will try to create a parody of Christianity and perform false miracles with their strange-alien powers... Woe to those who cannot tell the difference.

Note: These are related to the mark of the beast 666 as failed parodies of the sabbath.

Cain is a Vampire when he kills Abel and a Werewolf when he wanders in exile. Similarly, Nebuchadnezzar is a Vampire when he builds the gold statue, and a Werewolf when he turns into a beast.

Supplicant: Benn reflecting on the Symbolism of Death. Specifically, the relationship between Death, Sleep (little death?), Dreams & Healing/Renewal. Extended periods of lack of sleep lead to madness. To that end, what's the relationship between insomnia, the undead, and immortality?

Matthieu: Honestly, I feel like I'm running out of time to write about certain things before it's too late. So maybe we can talk about these subjects:

The Nephilim-giants, aborted rebirth and immortality, the undead, lack of sleep, Hybrids, Prostitutes, Occult infiltration, alien Parodies.

An unfamous martial artist once said:

"The greatest weakness people have is their need to be recognized. So you can detect false masters by how much they boast, show-off their abilities, and telegraph their moves."

"Never reveal more than 10% of your knowledge to an opponent, unless you are certain you will end the fight with the rest"
*He was referring to human opponents. When dealing with demonic AI-augmented cyborg vampires (and their thralls), lower the threshold to 1%.
That's good advice in these strange times.

What is sleep?

A systematic takedown that outwardly resembles destruction or death, also when viewed inwardly within a generated dreamworld (temporary simulation).

What is the role of sleep?

Shutting down a system during risky or unproductive times to renew and update it.

> Supplicant: Sleep can also be employed against you. You can get "knocked out" and then wake up in an unfamiliar place.

>In the story of Joseph, why does the cup bearer get a good end and the bread-maker get a bad end?

Their dreams are the same and they both express the general symbolism of falling asleep, which is:

"Losing control of your body and mind" (what happens when we fall asleep).
The bread represents the food-body.

From that perspective, "losing your body" is symbolized by "Wild animals came and ate my flesh!"

This is the baker's dream. He represents the perspective of being awake. He's losing control here (falling asleep). It's negative for him.

The wine represents "accepting to lose control" (getting tipsy)

From that perspective, falling asleep is seen as positive or "winning". Losing control is what the cup bearer is all about. He gives the wine.

From his perspective, it's a win to lose control of your body and mind.

Their dreams represent the experience of falling asleep (or going into exile, or going into famine) from two opposite perspectives.

Negative-losing from perspective of bread maker.

Positive-winning from the perspective of wine maker.

It's too simple to understand...

It took me 7 years of exile and then living in a tent to understand this simple (and now obvious) interpretation of these dreams. Go figure.

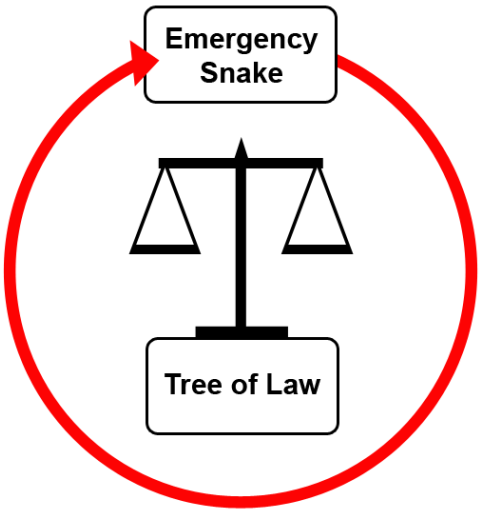
The Emergency Snake

The only way to stop this type of tyranny is to make sure the "snake" retracts and is forced to clean after itself completely (cancel itself out). The second form is already too far.
This has to happen or this snake will keep growing until invincible.

The Infinite Loophole

How to gradually transform a country's legal system and permanently replace it with a tyranny

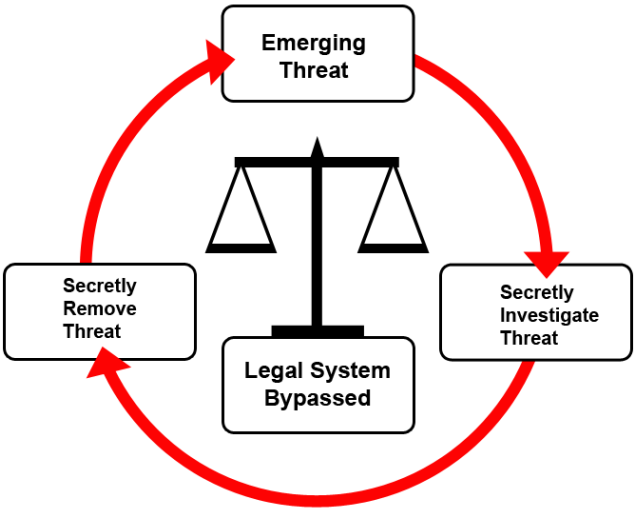


How the Snake will Completely Swallow the Tree

The Emergency Snake 1/10

Form 0 - The Secret Selfless Snake

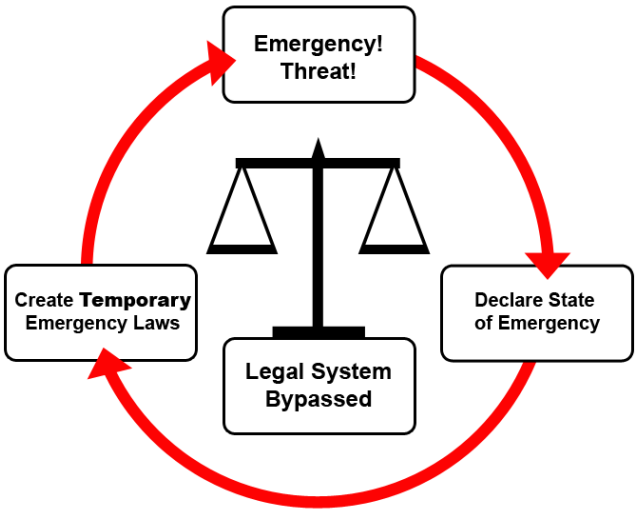
Unexpected or accidental threats can be dealt with by a secret power that silently removes threats



The Emergency Snake 2/10

Form 1 - The Self-Negating Snake

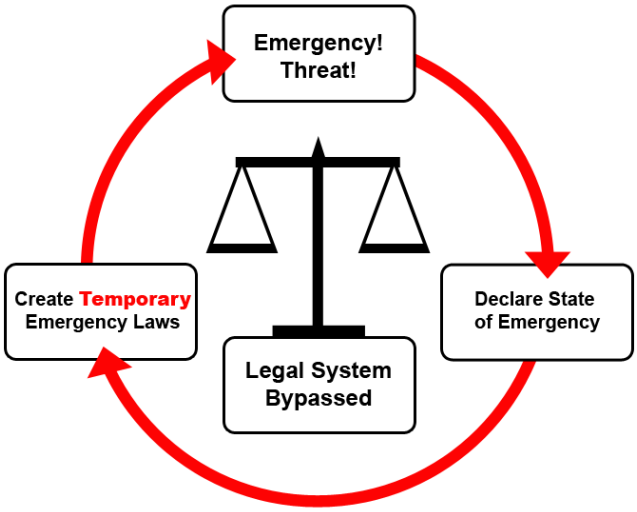
Unexpected or accidental threats can be dealt with by a temporary official power that removes threats and then removes itself completely



The Emergency Snake 3/10

Form 2 - The Self-Inflating Snake

Unexpected or accidental threats can be dealt with by a temporary official power that removes threats but leaves some emergency measures indefinitely

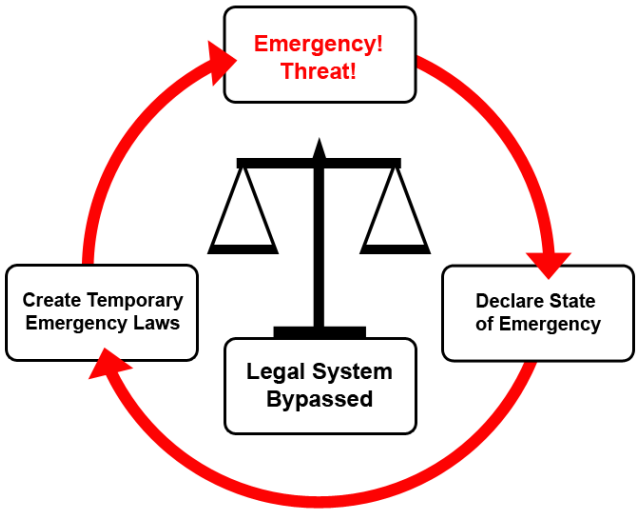


*Temporary can potentially last forever

The Emergency Snake 4/10

Form 3 - The Self-Creating Snake

Unexpected or accidental threats can be dealt with by a temporary official power that removes threats it could easily have caused itself

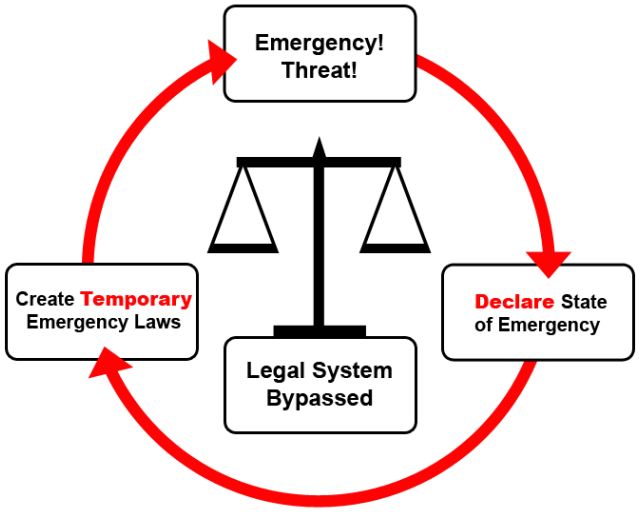


*The emergency can be secretly or indirectly caused for the purpose of declaring the state of emergency

The Emergency Snake 5/10

Form 4 - The Self-Sustaining Snake

Unexpected or accidental threats can be dealt with by a temporary official power that can define its own parameters of existence while removing the threat

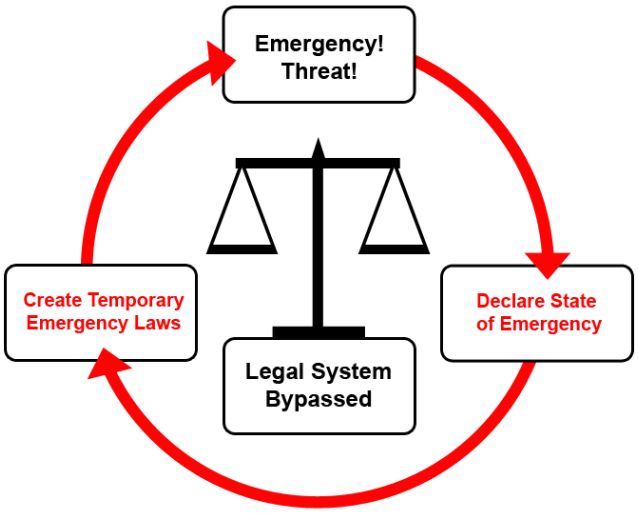


*The conditions for declaring a state of emergency can be lowered indefinitely and the conditions to remove it can be increased indefinitely

The Emergency Snake 6/10

Form 5 - The Self-Preserving Snake

Unexpected or accidental threats can be dealt with by a temporary official power that can create laws to protect itself against any attempt to block, remove or abolish it

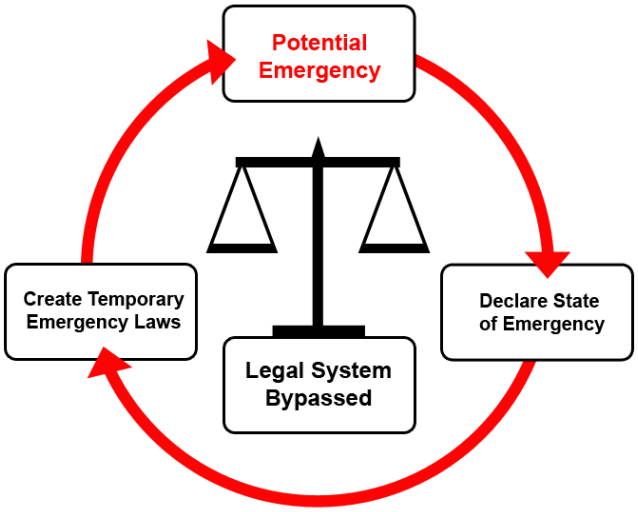


*Any opposition to declaring or maintaining a state of emergency or creating special laws can be suppressed by invoking emergency measures

The Emergency Snake 7/10

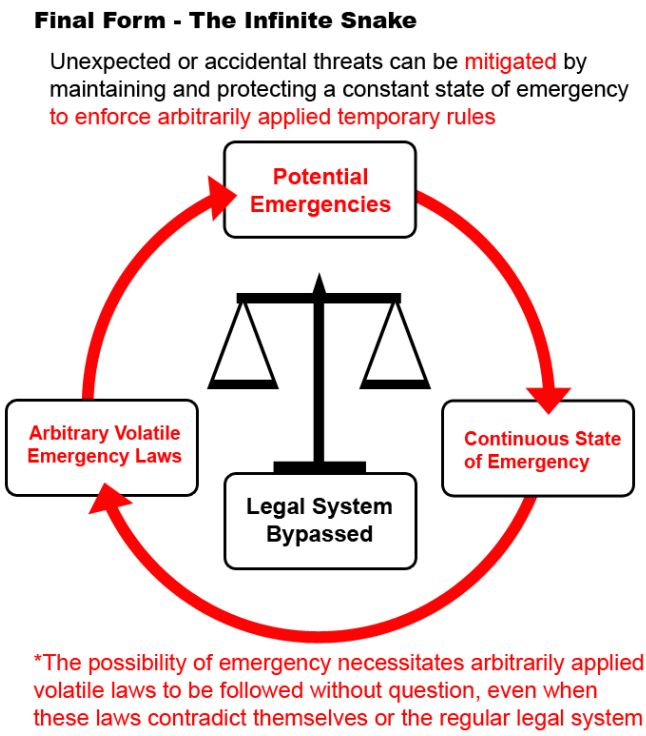
Form 6 - The Self-Preventing Snake

Unexpected or accidental threats can be mitigated by pre-emptively declaring a state of emergency based on the possibility of an emergency



*Potential emergencies require strict emergency measures to prevent potentially bigger emergencies and the need for even stricter emergency measures

The Emergency Snake 8/10



Final Form - The Infinite Snake
Unexpected or accidental threats can be mitigated by maintaining and protecting a constant state of emergency to enforce arbitrarily applied temporary rules
Potential Emergencies
Continuous State of Emergency
Legal System Bypassed
Arbitrary Volatile Emergency Laws
*The possibility of emergency necessitates arbitrarily applied volatile laws to be followed without question, even when these laws contradict themselves or the regular legal system

The Emergency Snake 9/10

How to gradually transform a country's legal system and permanently replace it with a tyranny

If Jesus didn't have the power of Resurrection, then the whole thing would be the incarnation of curse (Resurrection is the full power of renewal)

The idea that the cross is the worst possible curse is why he was "bled out on it". But without Resurrection, it is the worst curse. There is one extremely important "loophole" in the law because it did not take into account the possibility of Resurrection. It's this impossible loophole that made it possible to renew the law (by looking at it through the strange lens of this loophole).

This is deep subject. It is harder for a rich man (the powerful, the institution) to be saved (renewed) than for a camel to pass through the "eye of the needle". In this context, the camel represents the "rich man" that accumulates reserves on his back in order to survive the exile (or rather, to avoid exile or loss of control by never becoming poor - and thus not having to lose control even in bad times). The needle represents control (the hierarchy/ civilization) or something like that. The tools of control and of building space.

The "eye of the needle" is the bottom of the needle, where things "loop" and turn back on themselves. It represents gaining the perspective of this eye. f you want an example of a "rich man saved by going through the eye of the needle", take the story of Tamar (Judah is the "rich man" in this case, and Tamar is the loophole that he must go through to be saved- renewed) Nebuchadnezzar also goes though the eye of the needle.

It is about death and Resurrection. Going through the eye of the needle is going "through the cycle" which is death and renewal. Losing control (your riches) and then having a reversal of your situation saves you.
Perhaps Job "went through eye of needle" (maybe not as obvious).

Supplicant: OK but, as I find your interpretations extremely insightful and grounded, why wouldn't you include the dramatic difference in size between a needle and a camel as an important part of the rumination?

Matthieu: There is a lot more to be said.
Going through death and Resurrection means losing everything (become as small as possible). It's basically impossible for a rich man to go through it.

The "narrow path" Jesus describes also involves "not having anything" and "loving your enemy".

Matthieu: And if anyone puts on the "ring" then everything they do is tracked by the "secret eye" (the One Eye that sees all sides) and you also see the One Eye if you dare to wear the ring
Compare this to someone who joins a "central intelligence agency". Now they really see you.

There is an important tradition that says 666 is the combination of the following two:
1) 600 years of Noah's life (Gen 7:6)
2) 60 cubits high x 6 cubits wide of the statue of Nebuchadnezzar (Daniel 3:1)
(I believe it is Saint Irenaeus - probably in his Against Heresies.)
This represents the idea that 666 is an evil version of a "meta-space" (a meta space without it's unifying principle). Another way to say this is that it is a "fallen crown" or a "false crown".
Notice that the 600 years of Noah's life is about "time", and that the 60 by 6 of Nebuchadnezzar's statue is about "space". So 666 (according this idea) is a combination of the Flood (extreme time) and the Statue (extreme space). In other words, 666 is not just about establishing extreme space, it has always been about establishing a "fake crown", which parodies the meta-space which only God can establish.
So we have here (in a very old treaties) all the information we need to understand the highest nature of 666 in a very simple and easy to remember tradition (but who could have understood this better than our current generation - in the age of the "CORONA-VIRUS")

> Supplicant: [...] I don't agree but I appreciate you taking the time to share your views. Thank you.
> Matthieu: It's important that it was called the coronavirus. It is related to the symbolism of the "crown" and so is the vaccine. I described/predicted these patterns in my book (chapters 50-52).
> The problem is that it's a manufactured crown. A controlled crown --> 666 trying to imitate 7.
> Jesus received a true crown. It was an ironic crowning of Jesus by his enemies (that God turned into a real crown through the power of Resurrection -> 7)
> The manufactured version of this is a controlled opposition crown (666), which basically amounts to crowning yourself. Not an easy subject so forgive me if this is not so clear.

To understand the events of our times it is useful to imagine that we are living in the prequel to The Matrix. Just replace "humans are batteries" with "humans are a distributed computer". In order to reach Matrix levels of reality, two things would need to happen. On one hand, the consciousness of humans would be gradually transitioned from material reality into virtual reality. On the other hand, the consciousness of AIs would be gradually transitioned from virtual reality into material reality (mechanical robots or genetically engineered robots etc.)
Somebody should probably write that script but it might be a little too close to current reality to be considered entertainment.
